Russia and Here.
Flying Too Low.
Germany's Buying Panic.
No Cat, Then Beware.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

PROFESSOR TUGWELL, of the "highbrow brigade," tells Senators who hesitate to confirm him as under secretary of agriculture that he believes in the Constitution and that it should be "altered only by orderly process to meet the exigencies of changing economic conditions."

A considerable majority of Americans are in favor of that "orderly process" and will see to it.

Professor Tugwell is alleged to have expressed the opinion that "the peasants of Russia, under a so-called proletarian government, are relatively better off than farmers in the United States."

In what consists being "better off?" For every bathtub owned by peasants in Russia a hundred are owned by farmers in the United States. For every automobile owned by peasants in Russia there are probably a thousand owned by farmers in the United States. Bathtubs and automobiles are surely a part of being "better off."

AN AIRPLANE of the "American Airlines" was wrecked and burned in the Catskill Mountains, with all on board, seven, four passengers, two pilots and the "stewardess," dead.

The government is careful about inspecting planes and testing pilots. Is it sufficiently careful about stipulating the height at which passenger-carrying planes must fly and what pilots must do in dangerous weather?

A SEA-GOING vessel sails in "deep water." It does not skim along the tops of rocks near the surface. There is plenty of "deep water" in the atmosphere above this earth. Is there any reason why airplanes should skim as near as possible to the surface of the earth, frequently colliding with mountainsides and hills?

GERMANY, financially frightened, has a "buying panic." Because it is not certain how much German money will be worth in a little while, Germans are buying goods and storing them away.

You may have here some similar "buying panic," because, as a matter of necessity, we are going to have inflation here, whether we have it sensibly, by issuing money that doesn't have to pay interest, or continue inflating idiotically by issuing bonds, billions at a time, which represent inflation plus interest.

HERE THE BUYING panic will take the form of buying real properties, stocks which represent permanent values, and especially well located real estate, that will be valuable as long as anything in the United States remains valuable, and bring a good return on any kind of money that happens to be current.

If you have any good real estate, don't be in a hurry to sell.

SAILORS WITH friends on the big ship Leviathan are worried because that boat went to sea last Saturday with no cat on board. To sail without a cat, according to sailors, is "the worst possible luck."

And, most curiously, the same sailors consider it bad luck to sail with a clergyman on board. Why the presence of a clergyman or the absence of a cat should be dangerous to a ship is a puzzle.

DR. JAMES BRYANT CONANT, youthful and intelligent new president of Harvard University, tells graduates of the Stevens Institute of Technology that no matter what "social and economic order lies ahead of us, society will demand the luxuries and conveniences afforded by modern technology." Therefore, two professions will survive any troubles, "the engineers and the doctors." Engineers will be needed to provide what people want, and doctors to repair human machinery.

When Dr. Conant says "society will want" he means human society, the whole race, not the silly by-product commonly described as "society."

HUMAN BEINGS do not change, and the human race will want for the next ten thousand years what it has wanted in the past, namely, leisure and a sense of superiority for the few, with luxury, speed, power and safety from want.

The human race is growing along definite lines, just as a chicken grows in the shell. You cannot change the chicken to a mouser or canary bird by talking through the shell, and you cannot change the development of the human race by turning it from one path into another, or

DEATH PLANE HELD NAVY SECRETS

Mysterious Chemicals And 'Explosive D' Formula Found

LIVINGSTON MANOR, N. Y., June 12—(AP.)—The giant airplane which carried seven persons to their deaths on the rugged side of Mongaup Mountain near here carried valuable secret naval papers which were salvaged.

Dr. V. G. Burke, Sullivan County Coroner, disclosed the fact that the papers were aboard as he went ahead today with preparations for an inquest to determine the cause of the disaster.

He said the papers had been in possession of William Bader, Buffalo, one of the victims of the crash; that they had been salvaged, and were now in his possession.

Dr. Burke said strong representations were made today by T. H. Bennett, of the Semet-Solvay Company, employer of Bader, for possession of the papers, but that the request had been refused pending the completion of the inquest late tomorrow.

SECOND BAG MISSING

Dr. Burke said Bennett told him Bader had carried another bag which he was "very anxious to find." Burke said:

"There was no trace of it left."

Describing the contents of the bag which was salvaged, the Coroner said:

"We found a lot of literature on explosives. There was a bulletin issued by the Bureau of Mines on physical testing of high explosives and one on the quantitative estimates of ammonium picrate. There was one, which Bennett said was secret information, entitled 'Navy's Specifications of Explosive D.'"

Three bottles of chemicals, carried by Bader and found intact in the wreckage, also were in the possession of the Coroner. Bennett also asked for possession of these, and likewise was refused.

JAP WARNING GIVEN CHINA

SHANGHAI, June 12.—(AP.)—The Japanese government officially informed China today that it holds China responsible for the disappearance of Eimei Kuramoto, Japanese vice consul at Nanking, and reserves the right to take whatever action in the matter Japan considers appropriate.

Although Kuramoto disappeared last Friday, both Chinese and Japanese authorities stated that not a single trace of him has been found in a search of Nanking.

Yorikichi Suma, the Japanese consul general at Nanking, informed the Chinese foreign office this afternoon that Japan not only holds China responsible but may demand indemnity in the case.

The Japanese legation here stated that Japanese residents in Nanking fear for their safety as the result of "the unpleasant relations with the Chinese police in Nanking in recent days."

This last, it was said, constitutes reason for dispatching Japanese warships to Nanking.

RUM PAROLES FOR 800 LIFTED

Federal Judge R. M. Gibson today made a neat little present to some 800 violators of the old prohibition laws—he lifted their paroles.

The court ordered the paroles lifted for those who had not been given specific suspended sentences—that is, if a violator was sentenced to, say one year, then given a parole, he does not share in the order signed today.

Judge Gibson's action means that the 800, scattered throughout Western Pennsylvania, need not make the monthly report to George G. O'Brien, parole officer.

Tarentum Vetoes Sunday Mushball

Protests by church organizations caused Tarentum firemen to reconsider their request to play mushball on Sundays. They made no objection last night to the Borough Council rescinding its former action in permitting them to play, beginning next Sunday.

CLUB RACKET FOUGHT BY STATE

Douglas Accused in First Charges Filed By Rum Agents

Following closely on the heels of a general cleanup in Philadelphia, state liquor enforcement officers have started a drive to break the "chartered club" racket in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County.

This announcement was made today following the filing of conspiracy informations against John Douglas, Jr., former mayoralty candidate; his attorney, W. F. Michael, and Mrs. Martha Kenny, of 922 Western avenue.

It was stated at the enforcement headquarters of the State Liquor Control Board that the action taken against Douglas and the others was but the beginning of a vigorous drive to hale into court the operators of "one-man clubs" who are selling liquor under the guise of chartered clubs.

ATTORNEYS LINKED

Enforcement officers also announced that they would take action against a number of attorneys they say have been engaged in the practice of setting up former speakeasy proprietors in "legitimate business," buying and reviving dead charters, granted years ago in local courts.

Douglas and Attorney Michael were expected to post bond some time tonight or tomorrow with Alderman Ray E. Schneider on the conspiracy charges made by E. Jimcousky, agent for the State Liquor Control Board. They are accused along with the woman, Jimcousky stated, of obtaining a beer license for Mrs. Kenny after she had paid $200 for what Jimcousky termed was a "dead charter."

The charter, originally issued to the Neptune Hunting and Fishing Club, was used to obtain a beer license for the woman's establishment in Western avenue.

CLUB HELD 'MYTH'

State enforcement officers declare the club does not exist, there are no officers and the entire procedure constituted a conspiracy to violate the state liquor control law.

Mrs. Kenny was arrested Friday night by North Side police on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. She was fined $25 in Morals Court.

At the hearing it was brought out that liquor was found in the establishment, but the woman did not possess a liquor license.

The police took the case before Alderman Schneider, and state enforcement officers were notified.

Mrs. Kenny was discharged by Alderman Schneider on the charge of violating the state liquor laws when it was learned she had not sold any of the liquor, which was purchased legally from a state store. However, it developed at the hearing that she possessed a beer license issued to the Neptune Hunting and Fishing Club.

$200 FOR CHARTER

When questioned, Mrs. Kenny said she had paid $200 to Attorney Michel for the charter and the license, which he obtained from the County Treasurer's office. She declared she had been told to name members of her family officers in the club and that she would then be able legally to opedate as a club.

Michael said he had obtained the charter from Douglas, who did not attend the hearing, but who was outside the aldgerman's office.

At this point in the examination, Jimcousky made the conspiracy charges against Michael, Douglas and Mrs. Kenny.

Douglas, when told of the action, inforded Schneider that he would post bond and Michael also promised to deliver a bond sometime later. Date for the hearing has not been set.

State enforcement officers declared they are determined to break up the charter selling business in Allegheny County.

Cox Has White House Talk With President

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP.)—James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio and 1920 Democratic presidential nominee, called today at the White House for a luncheon conference with President Roosevelt.

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE

DOUG, JR., HELPS END FIRE SCARE

Universal Service.

LONDON, June 12.—The London Daily Herald reported today that a panic was narrowly averted last night at the Theater Royal in Birmingham, where Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Gertrude Lawrence are co-starring in "The Winding Journey," when cries of "Fire!" started the audience stampeding for the exits.

The shouting began when smoke drifted across the stage while Miss Lawrence and Nicholas Hannen, a noted character actor, were playing a scene on the stage. The actors finally succeeded in calming the audience.

Young Fairbanks, in a speech from the stage, explained the alarm arose after a cigaret case made of an inflammable composition suddenly burst into flames.

Treasure Hunter On Cocos Isle Saved

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 12.—(AP.)—The rescue of an English treasure hunter on romantic Cocos Island was reported today by Capt. Fred Lewis, owner and master of the yacht Stranger, as he arrived in port at the end of an 83-day, 9,000-mile voyage to equatorial waters.

The stranded treasure hunter, George Cooknell, found ill and out of food, was taken aboard for the trip farther south.

Train Blast Perils Austrian Official

VIENNA, June 12.—(INS.)—Emil Fey, member of the Austrian cabinet and former vice chancellor, narrowly escaped death today when a bomb wrecked the railway tracks near Neusidel, a short time before the train on which Fey was travelling to Budapest was scheduled to pass.

The bombing was discovered, the train halted and detoured over another route.

Gain in Business Spurs Coin Demand

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(INS.)—Sharp increases in small business have created an abnormal demand for half-dollars, quarters and dimes, the Treasury reported today.

Secretary Morgenthau described this demand as extraordinary and far out of proportion to that which has occurred at this season during the history of the mints.

SENATE TEST CARRIED BY TUGWELL

'Brain Trust' Chief Confirmed for Job; Foes Defeated

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Confirmation of the appointment of Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, reputed chief "brain truster," as Under Secretary of Agriculture was voted by the Senate Agriculture Committee today.

Senator Smith (Dem.), of South Carolina, fiery committee chairman and anti-Tugwellite, was overridden by the committee's action. He had led the fight against Tugwell.

The vote was 16 in favor of confirmation and two against—the dissenters being Senators Smith and Hatfield (Rep.), of West Virginia.

FRIENDS ELATED

Those voting in favor of confirmation were: Senators Cutting (Rep.), New Mexico; Hatch (Dem.), New Mexico; Wheeler (Dem.), Montana; McGill (Dem.), Kansas; Bankhead (Dem.), Alabama; Bone (Dem.), Washington; Murphy (Dem.), Iowa; Norris (Rep.), Nebraska; Capper (Rep.), Kansas; Norbeck (Rep.), South Dakota; Caraway (Dem.), Arkansas; Bulow (Dem.), South Dakota; Pope (Dem.), Idaho; Frazier (Rep.), North Dakota; Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, and McNary (Rep.), Oregon.

Senators Norris and Murphy, Tugwell partisans, rejoiced in the committee's action, but Murphy, who nearly became involved in a fist fight with Senator Smith yesterday, said he reminded Dr. Tugwell of the Biblical quotation in the Book of Job:

"Oh, that mine enemy would write a book."

But a bystander quoted another Biblical phrase:

"A soft answer turneth away wrath."

The reference was to the "Brain Truster's" mild demeanor on the witness stand at yesterday's hearing.

HAIL 'GOOD SHOWING'

Most committee members said Tugwell made a "good showing" under questioning for nearly four and one-half hours before the

'RICHEST GIRL' BOMB TARGET

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—(AP.)—An alleged threat to bomb the Somerville estate of Doris Duke, the tobacco heiress, who has been called the world's richest girl, was revealed today in a federal grand jury indictment returned against Thomas Layden, 17-year-old Newark youth.

Layden was arrested in connection with an extortion attempt aimed at Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey. McCarter was told in a letter to leave $3,000 at a designated spot, or the Newark Terminal would be blown up.

That Layden had allegedly demanded a similar amount of money from Miss Duke under threats of bombing her country home at Somerville was not known until the indictment was returned. It charged Layden with attempted extortion and sending threatening letters through the mails in both the McCarter and Duke cases.

Attached to the indictment was a copy of the threatening letter received by Miss Duke.

Patrolman Beaten By Thugs Downtown

Patrolman Joseph Reindl, walking his downtown beat, was attacked and beaten by three thugs at 4 a. m., today, he told his superior officers.

Reindl reported that he was walking in Montour way when he was slugged on the head. The police patrol took him to Mercy Hospital, where he was treated for lacerations. The patrolman's nightstick was missing, but his revolver was untouched. He said he knew of no reason for the attack.

MISS HAZEL FITZGERALD

WOMAN GUARD AT PARK POOL

A lone woman lifeguard, Mrs. Hazel Fitzgerald of 1429 Beechview avenue, will be on the job when the county's South Park swimming pool opens Friday.

Officials of the Sportsmen's Supply Company, 643 Smithfield street, who have the contract to supply the dozen swimming suits ordered for the pool guards, received her size, a 34, from Mrs. Fitzgerald today.

All the county life guards will wear vivid red one-piece suits with shirts. The county's coat-of-arms in white will appear on the chest and "guard" in big letters on the back.

Mrs. Fitzgerald has held a clerkship in county offices for some time.

She was Western Pennsylvania and Middle Atlantic States women's champion for eight years, swimming the 50, 100 and 220-yard distances.

Federal Postmaster Accused of Theft

Jacob A. Giehll, postmaster at Federal for eight years, today was held for the grand jury by the United States Commissioner on a charge of embezzlement. His funds were said to have been short $307.73 on May 14.

Giehll furnished $1,000 bond.

WHITE HOUSE ADVISING ON NEW MOVE

Congress Prepared to Speed Law to Help Avert Walkout

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP.)—Emergency action to avert a paralyzing steel strike may grow out of a White House conference today.

President Roosevelt and high officials conferred on the fiery controversy yesterday and there were indications they would meet today for another session.

Abandonment of the Wagner labor board bill until next session, and enactment instead of temporary power for the administration to handle such labor disputes as the projected steel strike, was indicated more strongly at the Capitol today.

Hugh S. Johnson, Senator Robert Wagner, chairman of the labor board, and Labor Department experts were working on the new stop-gap legislation.

DETAILS WITHHELD

While details were withheld, it appeared to embrace legislative instead of the present executive authority for the NRA labor board to conciliate in the steel and other cases.

At the White House the impression was given that President Roosevelt had no plans to ask the legislation, however. This conflicted with information at the House. In any event, the President was keeping close watch on efforts at mediation and giving advice.

The resolution is supposed to be brief and of a more or less general and strictly temporary nature. Presumably efforts would be made to revamp the Wagner labor board bill in a manner more acceptable both to capital and labor between now and the January meeting of Congress.

Senate leaders said it was possible that the new joint resolution would be put through Friday

New Violence Feared In Butchers' Strike

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 12.—(AP.)—New disorders were feared today at the Rochester Packing Company's plant, where six persons were injured last night when police resorted to tear gas and hose lines to disperse a group of strikers and sympathizers gathered in front of the plant—scene of several outbreaks since a strike of butchers began a week ago.

Packing company officials today continued to refuse the demands of the strikers for a 15 per cent increase in wages and a 40-hour week.

Ohio Steel Plants Plan to Continue

WARREN, O., June 12.—(AP.)—Officials of the Republic Steel Corporation today said the Warren and Niles plants will continue operations in event of a steel holiday move.

The general body of the employe representatives issued a statement saying a strike would be unwarranted and not in accord with the Presidents' recovery program.

Birdmen Plans All Set For 'Follow Leader'

Seven speedy Monocoupes playing "follow the leader"—

Seven identical planes dipping and looping and doing the "barrel roll"—

Something Pittsburgh youngsters never have seen—a childhood game played high in the sky—will be featured at the City-County airport next Saturday afternoon.

The daring air game will be staged at the Sun-Telegraph Junior Birdmen's air pageant, beginning at noon and lasting until 4:30 p. m.

Pilot "Jack" Morris, former Army flier, is arranging the "follow the leader" stunt as one of the entertainment features on a program that already promises to be the best exhibition ever presented at a flying field in this area.

Amoung the planes to participate, he said, will be his own and those of Helen MacCloskey, George Dixon and Helen Ball, wife of Clifford Ball, pioneer airport man.

Explaining the stunt, Morris said today:

"The idea is that one plane takes the lead and each fol-

Woman Driver Denies Kiss Caused Crash

A kiss was bestowed on the woman driver of an automobile just before her car chashed, causing injury to two other women, a witness testified today in a damage suit in Common Pleas Court.

And then the defendant in the action—Mrs. Margaret Stevenson, widow of the late A. W. Stevenson, South Hills realtor and Pitt athlete—indignantly denied the allegation.

The witness who testified to the kissing incident was Mrs. Raymond A. Turpen, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and formerly of Pittsburgh.

She said Mrs. Stevenson was kissed by "Mr. Carmichael" while Mrs. Stevenson was driving her car with Mr. Carmichael seated beside her.

Mrs. Turpen and Mrs. Emilie McC. Beadling, of Dormont, are suing Mrs. Stevenson for injuries they allege they received while riding in the defendant's automobile near Bedford, O., July 21, 1930. They were en route to Cleveland.

"Mr. Carmichael" was not identified further in the testimony.

Mrs. Beadling testified the man had his arms around Mrs. Stevenson and that he was sitting so close to her there was room for another in the front seat.

Mrs. Beadling and Mrs. Turpen were in the rear seat.

The automobile crashed into a truck. Counsel for Mrs. Stevenson said the accident was caused by the condition of the road.

CASH PAYMENT OF BONUS BEATEN AS SENATE VOTES SILVER

MONETARY BILL WAITS HOUSE APPROVAL

Minor Changes Bring Brief Delay to Measure

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP.)—The administration's silver purchase plan is expected to become the law of the land in short order.

The Senate approved it, 55 to 25, late yesterday without accepting a single amendment opposed by administration forces. Among those rejected was a rider calling for immediate cash payment of the bonus.

Only House approval of Senate amendments and President Roosevelt's signature are needed now to enact the measure

It calls for a policy of increasing the use of silver in monetary stocks until it reaches a ratio of 25 to 75 for gold. Advocates say it will require the Treasury to buy 1,400,000,000 ounces and issue silver certificates against this in amount equal to the cost of the metal. The white metal would be bought at the world price, but valued in the monetary stock at $1.29 an ounce.

Estimates of possible inflation have run as high as $1,500,000,000, depending on how far the President goes in exercising his new powers. Senator McCarren (Dem.), of Nevada, said:

"This is a great victory for the silver people in the West. It puts silver on the same currency basis as gold, the first time since 1873 it has been accorded such a place."

The entire silver bloc voted for the bill, even those senators who had sought to amend it on the ground it would not change the status of silver as money. Among the six Democratic senators who voted against the bill was Carter Glass, Virginia's determined "sound money" advocate. It was the first monetary bill to go through the Senate under the Roosevelt "New Deal" without debate from Glass.

On the bonus vote, 11 Republicans combined with 19 Democrats and Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, to favor the amendment. It was voted down by 17 Republicans and 34 Democrats.

CLOSED BANK RELIEF VOTED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Senate today adopted the conference report on the Federal Deposit Insurance Bill, extending the temporary federal bank deposit insurance for another year after July 1. It also raised the limit of the guarantee to cover deposits up to $5,000.

The bill also authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to receivers of closed banks, valuating the assets "in anticipation of an orderly liquidation over a period of years."

This provision was expected to bring relief to depositors in closed banks.

The bill now goes to the President, the House having ratified the report.

SENATOR FACING PROBE QUITS

MALONE, N. Y., June 12—(AP.)—Warren T. Thayer, 65, veteran Republican State Senator under fire on account of his relations with a public utility corporation, resigned yesterday. A special session of the Senate had been summoned to convene eight days hence to pass upon his case.

The Senate judiciary committee recently investigated Thayer's relations with the Associated Gas and Electric Corporation after correspondence between Thayer and company officials had been made public at a hearing before the Federal Trade Commission in Washington.

For several years Thayer was chairman of the Senate committee on public service.

Thayer, in a statement, explained that some of his Senate associates felt that "although there was no official misconduct on my part," a vote cast by them in his favor might be construed by some of their constituents as a vote of approval of his attitude of power legislation, and this might be detrimental to their political interests and to the interests of the Republican party.

committee yesterday. They stressed the fact that he had proclaimed himself as opposed to adopting the Russian form of government in this country, and as favorable to the Constitution of the United States.

Smith believed the committee would reject Tugwell. He said:

'The hearing yesterday made me more against Dr. Tugwell than I was before. His writings are radical and he knows little of practical farming. Why, he said he worked on the farm only during vacations from college."

Hatfield said he might alter his general policy of favoring confirmation of all Presidential appointments, declaring:

"Dr. Tugwell is a superfictionist, a misfit and should be eliminated. I was amazed that he repudiated statements he made in his book published in May, 1933."

Dr. Wirt Denounces Tugwell's Testimony

Concerning Dr. Tugwell's repudiation of the Soviet "idea of blue print planning," Dr. Wirt said:

"In my estimation, Dr. Tugwell's explanation is merely the usual explanation of radicals who, when placed in similar positions, invariably deny any serious import in their statements and affirm they were 'only joking.'"

FLAYS TUGWELL

Dr. Wirt recently defended himself before a congressional committee after charging that the "brain trustees," of whom Dr. Tugwell was one, were planning to throw the government into the throes of Communism.

The educator declared:

"I do not consider any part of Dr. Tugwell's statement, which is too long to quote, either 'scientific' or 'detached.'

"Within the last four months, Dr. Tugwell has reiterated his theories in his recent book, 'Our Economic Society.' This book is advertised by its authors and publishers as 'the factual background and theoretical framework for the New Deal.'"

QUOTES BOOK

Dr. Wirt quoted paragraphs from the book to prove his contention that Dr. Tugwell favors economic planning. In one instance, he said, Dr. Tugwell wrote:

"Russia has shown that planning is practicable."

Concluding his statement, Dr. Wirt said:

"After all, are not the acts of men just as significant as their excuses?"

by "learned arguments." The race controls, directs and manages itself.

TALKING TO young men of Canisius College, Postmaster General Farley advises them to escape from the depression and all their troubles by developing some new idea. He reminds them that Watt, Franklin, Edison, McCormick and Morse, using brains and inventive power, not only made themselves great and independent but provided employment for multitudes.

Thousands of things are being made. Find a better way of doing one of them, and you are "made."

OTHER DAYS, other methods. When two women came before Solomon, claiming the same baby, Solomon discovered the truth easily by ordering that the baby be cut in two, and half given to each mother. One woman said, "No, give the whole baby to the other woman," and Solomon knew that the real mother was the one that did not want the baby cut in two.

In Mexico two ladies, Senora Osario and Senora Rodriquez, ask Judge Garrido to decide which is the mother of a girl baby claimed by both. The judge orders no sword, no chopping, but orders a blood test of the two alleged mothers and the infant. The resemblance in two of the blood "types" will show which is the mother.

Solomon's method was more romantic, the Mexican method probably more exact.

MISS MARY ANNE KNAPP, dead at the age of one hundred and eight, minus two months, had lived for the last ninety-nine years in the same house in Montgomery County, Pa. What peaceful happiness!

Miss Knapp had many centenarians in her family, including General Worrell, of our Revolutionary War, who lived to be 112. She was a good Democrat and voted regularly. And said anybody could live one hundred years who would "live a good, clean, Christian life."

She knew, of course, that a hundred years would have seemed nothing to Abraham, to say nothing of Methusaleh, and they never heard of Christianity.

'Samaritan' Fired On by Autoist He Cautioned

Fired upon by a motorist he attempted to aid, William Aufderheide, 29, of 1303 Goebel street, was taken to Presbyterian Hospital early today, suffering from shock and burns about the eyes.

Police believe the auto driver fired a blank cartridge at him from close range.

Aufderheide reported he was standing at Fulton and Sheffield streets when the driver started to go through a traffic stop sign. He told the autoist he was violating the law and the latter backed his car and shot at him, according to police.

HOME BUILDING BILL SPEEDED BY ROOSEVELT

President Takes Hand In House Dispute, Passage Near

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—President Roosevelt today personally intervened in the bitter House fight for the administration's housing bill.

The President, it was revealed at a session of the Rules Committee, asked that the bill be speedily passed and also expressed dissatisfaction with the decision of the House banking committee.

The Rules Committee paved the way for speedy action, by permitting the measure to be called up with three hours of debate allowed. It likely will reach final passage tomorrow.

GROUP ASSAILED

Representative O'Connor (Dem.) of New York, member of the Rules Committee, assailed the Banking Committee for its revision of the bill. He asserted that it was revised to prevent low-cost housing and slum clearance in the big metropolitan centers.

The original administration bill, Representative Luce (Rep.) of Massachusetts, asserted, "was misrepresented to us by two young men who presumed to speak for the administration."

While spokesmen for the "Housing Brain Trust" assailed the House committee for capitulating to a "building and loan lobby," the committee asserted that the original administration bill was designed to "bail out a lot of worthless mortgages."

BALK AT CHANGES

After the committee refused, on request of administration officials, to change the bill back to its original form, the Senate Banking Committee sent a companion bill back to its sub-committee.

Chairman Steagall (Dem.), of Alabama, of the House Banking Committee, who supported the administration in the committee fight, will call up the measure for debate under a special rule.

The measure presented to the House would create a home credit insurance corporation with $200,000,000 capital, subscribed by the Treasury, to insure banks, trust companies, personal finance companies, mortgage companies, building and loan associations, installment lending corporations and others against losses which may result from advances to real estate owners. The insurance would be limited to 20 per cent of the total of loans.

FLETCHER MAPS DRIVE AGAINST DEMOCRATS

G.O.P. Chairman Jokes With Newsmen on Party Hopes

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Republican fight for control of Congress in the forthcoming campaign is going to be based on the record of the Roosevelt New Deal, Henry P. Fletcher, new Republican chairman, said here today.

The Republicans believe the record to be vulnerable in many respects, and they propose to probe those vulnerable spots.

The new G. O. P. chairman came to Washington to confer with party leaders in Congress, and seek to smooth out some of the friction that has existed in the party for the past few years. He was asked:

"Just what specifically in the New Deal do you intend to attack?"

SENSE OF HUMOR

He replied smilingly:

"That would be difficult to say at this time. It would be more difficult to say what aspects of the New Deal would be supported."

One thing the new Republican chairman has brought into the Republican picture. That is a sense of humor and a humorous realization of the magnitude of the job the Republicans have in attempting to overturn such huge Democratic majorities as now exist in both houses. Frankly, they realize it is an impossible task this year. But they hope to make a good showing, particularly where the House is concerned, and prepare for 1936. They realize they will be fortunate to keep what they have in the Senate.

Fletcher said one of the major efforts of the party under his direction will be to attract and organize young Republican voters. He said:

"It is absolutely necessary that we enlist the younger element of the Republican party.

"One way to do it is to impress upon them that they and their children are going to have to pay for these enormous sums of federal money now being poured out."

MUM ON HOOVER

The new chairman was wary of comment as to what part ex-President Herbert Hoover is to play, if any, in the future councils of the party.

The party situation in some states, he said, is excellent, adding:

"We are in good shape in Pennsylvania, for example."

He expressed the opinion that Senator David A. Reed would be re-elected this fall, "even if it's a three-cornered fight." This was with reference to Gov. Gifford Pinchot's implied threat to run independently against Reed and Joseph F. Guffey, the Democratic nominee.

NAVY SECRETS ON PLANE

cident was termed "absolutely unthinkable" by Bennett.

None of the bottles contained ammonium picric acid, Bennett declared. Crystals of that chemical are lemon yellow in color, he pointed out; the crystals found in the unbroken vials were of different hue.

Bennett did not know what the crystals were, but, he asserted, they could have had nothing to do with the crash since the bottles containing them were intact, and the amount of the substance was insufficient to cause any damage if it had exploded.

Bennett officially identified Bader's body. He did it by inspecting a tatter of clothing the victim wore. He will remain here for the inquest tomorrow.

Dr. Burke said Bennett volunteered to have chemists present at the inquest tomorrow at Liberty to identify the contents of the bottles.

Meanwhile, preparations went forward at Liberty for sending to their homes the broken and burned bodies of the victims.

Arrangements were made to send the bodies of the three Buffalo, N. Y., victims to their homes on a train leaving shortly after midnight tonight.

Dead on Range

JOHN A. KUNA

CADDIE'S DEATH BRINGS PROBE

County detectives today are investigating the death of John A. Kuna, 16, of Beadling, a caddie at the St. Clair driving range on Bethel road, Upper St. Clair Township last night.

According to Zeke Reed, an employe of the range, three other caddies in the field at the time missed young Kuna and started to search for him. They found him lying on the ground behind a target. Dr. R. E. Mercer, of Bethel road, was called and pronounced the boy dead.

An autopsy revealed he had died of shock and hemorrhage following a fractured skull.

Morgue attaches said that the boy's injury could have been caused by a flying golf ball.

Mt. Lebanon firemen used an inhalator for 75 minutes in a vain attempt to revive him.

UTILITIES HEAD HERE ASSAILS NEW DEAL

Phillips Sees Peril to Country in Reform Proposals

Reform activities of the New Deal were criticized today by Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, in an address before the Chamber of Commerce.

He asserted that as long as the federal budget is unbalanced, there will be definite threat of "vicious" inflation, but pointed out that President Roosevelt has promised a balanced budget in 1935-36.

Of reform measures, he said:

"Whether good or bad in the long run, attempts at reform must inevitably create uncertainties because of the new conditions created. Uncertainties restrict rather than expand. To a considerable extent it seems evident that reform activities have nullified or greatly curtailed the results obtained from activities directly aimed at recovery."

SECURITIES AFFECTED

Phillips said the Securities Exchange Act will definitely narrow the security markets and has had a depressing effect upon investors. He said its provisions "give possibilities of governmental interference with business, the extent of which cannot be estimated at this time."

Stating that business during the past six months has been artificially supported through huge expenditures by the federal government, he added:

"Obviously this cannot go on forever. The critical question therefore is whether the flow of private money into business will be restored to its normal volume before the government credit, which is being constantly weakened by continuing heavy expenditures and unbalanced budgets, becomes sufficiently impared to produce serious inflation."

FUNDS NOT LACKING

Phillips said it must be concluded from statistics showing there is a total of 39 billion dollars in bank deposits and funds potentially available under suitable conditions through the extension of bank credit that there is no lack of funds for financing capital development, provided fundamental conditions are right for such development.

Argument that there is no material demand for financing of new plant, he said, has been made at the bottom of every previous depression, "and yet with recovery the demand for new capital plant has returned in greater volume than ever before."

COFIDENCE NEEDED

He continued:

"The fundamental condition necessary to restore the flow of private capital into business is the restoration of confidence in the business and industrial world—a belief that the rights of private property will be protected and that private business will be permitted to operate under stable and reasonable conditions, so that those who put new money into business at this time will have assurance that the integrity of the irinvestment will be maintained and fair returns will be earned on it."

Danger of an experience like that of German and France was seen by Phillips in the increase in the federal debt. He said:

"This debt is being financed largely by the banking system and the life insurance companies so that our entire economic system and the savings of millions of people are involved in this question of government credit.

"Should the public debt increase to the point where there was loss of confidence in the public credit, so that government securities fell seriously below par, an inflationery situation would be created that could not be controlled. Our experience then undoubtedly would be the same as the post-war experience of Germany and France.

"Such an inflationary experience ultimately results in greatly reducing or even wiping out the central government debt. It is not pleasant to contemplate the results that would follow complete or even partial repudiation of the debt of the United States government."

NRA 'PERMANENT'

Phillips expressed a belief that the National Recovery Administration will become a permanent institution. He said radical changes are taking place in its policies and pointed out news dispatches reporting price-fixing policies have been dropped except for stated projects during temporary emergencies. He continued:

"It seems to me that business should take a constructive position in this problem and do what it can to bring about a rational administration of the Recovery Act."

Phillips urged the members of the Chamber of Commerce to keep themselves fully informed on the economic significance of the acts of national, state and municipal governments in dealing with economic and business matters, stating that the success of democratic government depends upon intelligent action by its citizens.

At its business session, the chamber gave executive committee power to act for the board of directors in emergency matters.

New Tariff Bill Waits Roosevelt Approval

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt will sign the new tariff bill tonight and thereby put into effect new rates on a score of products that are imported from countries which charge a higher tariff than are charged by the United States on the same products.

The President will sign the bill at 9:30 o'clock (eastern daylight time), after the customs houses have closed, so that it will become operative on the following day in all ports of entry.

Automobiles and trucks, paper and paper products, timber, gun powder and other explosives and bicycles and coal and coal products are the chief articles that will be affected.

Administration officials said that none of the rate changes were considered important because of the small number of articles affected and the few countries that had instituted discriminatory rates against similar American products.

One section of the new bill will repeal sections of the tariff act of 1930 which are in conflict with the most favored nation clause granting equality of treatment to all nations on all tariff rates on imports. This clause is contained in most American reciprocal trade agreements.

King George to Take Bow From 12 U. S. Women

LONDON, June 12.—(AP.)—Plumed with ostrich feathers, bejeweled and richly gowned, 12 more American women are ready to bend their knees before royalty in Buckingham Palace tonight.

The third court season found women from the four corners of the United States prepared for their great, if brief, moment of social glory when they bow before the throne where sit the King and Queen of the British.

Most American husbands must wait outside the palace or at their hotels, for husbands can attend only if they themselves have been presented at court previously, and few are eligible.

Among the Americans to be presented tonight are: Mrs. Claude K. Boettcher, of Denver, whose son, Charles Boettcher II, was kidnaped and returned last year; Mrs. Philip John Britt, New York, widow of the banking and corporation lawyer; Mrs. Henry W. Catlin, of New York; Miss Flora Louise Louis, Miss Barbara Macauley, daughter of Capt. Edward Macauley, U. S. N., retired, and Mrs. Macauley, of Burlingame, Cal., and Mrs. Charles V. McLean, of Philadelphia, whose husband is connected with the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

TILLY DENIES PRINCE WRECKED ROMANCE WITH ARTIST

DANCER BLAMES AVERSION TO SWIMMING

Society Folk Crowd Court for Divorce Hearing

By GEORGE LAIT
International News Service.

LONDON, June 12.—It was not Tilly Losch's acquaintance, purely plantonic, of course, with Prince Serge Obolensky that wrecked her romance with Edward P. W. James, brother of Mrs. Marshall Field III.

It was rather because Tilly either could not or would not swim in the enticing waters of Waikiki Beach and objected to the insistence of James, who is an artist, on selecting her sartorial ensemble.

This, at least was the line of defense indicated today as the trial of James' suit for divorce from the beautiful Hungarian dancer, began before Judge Sir Body Merryman. James is charging Miss Losch with misconduct with Prince Obolensky, brother-in-law of Vincent Astor in three countries, namely, France, the United States and Hawaii.

THRONG IN COURT

A fashionable crowd thronged the courtroom to hear the evidence, which is expected to get warmer as the trial gets older.

Not the least of the magnets that drew the curious was the prospect of a battle between the imposing counsel representing the principals. Horman Birkett, an outstanding member of the British bar, appeared for James; Sir Patrick Hastings, noted trial lawyer, for Miss Losch, and Roland Oliver for Prince Obolensky, who was named corespondent by James.

Two women were on the jury.

MAN BLAMED

Sir Patrick Hastings lost no time in laying down the lines of battle after James had completed his formal testimony. He launched into a savage cross-examination which sought to place the blame for the blighted romance squarely upon James.

Questioning James particularly about his sojourn in Honolulu, where he claims Tilly misbehaved with the Prince. He sought to dispel James' insinuations of misconduct by bringing out that most of the fuss in Honolulu was because Tilly either could not or would not go swimming with her hubby.

James admitted that Tilly always was in his sight when they left their hotel.

A thunderstorm had made the animals nervous.

King left the exposition grounds and went to a hospital for treatment of his wounds. He was given an injection of anti-tetanus serum.

Weather Conditions

The low that was centered over Minnesota yesterday morning is now centered over Eastern Ontario, Sault Sainte Marie and Parry Sound, 29.48 inches. The low pressure extends southward over the Ohio Valley states, thence southwestward to New Mexico. It is causing light showers over the lake region section and southward into the Ohio Valley states. There is also a showery condition over the southern portion of the Appalachian Mountains. Elsewhere the skies are mostly clear this morning, except in the far Northwest, where another low is causing light scattered showers. High pressure is located over the plains states and over Florida. Temperature changes since yesterday morning were slight and mostly towards cooler. The weather is now moderately cool over most of the country.

River Conditions

The rivers are falling slowly. Stage at Franklin is 9.2 Foot; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 10.4; Pittsburgh, 9.8; No. 10, 8.6; No. 12, 6.4. The dams are up. Additional flashboards were placed on dam at Lock No. 4, Allegheny River, causing a rise of 0.9 foot at Lock No. 5.

BROTHER FINDS YOUTH VICTIM OF DROWNING

Two Recent Swissvale Graduates Die When Canoe Upsets

Two youths graduated last week from Swissvale High School were drowned in the Monongahela River at Rankin when their canoe upset in the waves behind a steamboat, late yesterday.

The victims were Andrew J. Dunn, 18, of 7000 Backhawk street, and Paul Christy, 18, of 328 La Blanc street, both Swissvale. The bodies, recovered by Rankin firemen and employes of the Carnegie Steel Company's Carrie furnaces, were identified by Dunn's brother, Thomas Dunn, 16, who ran to see what had attracted the crowd on the river bank.

Firemen and Carnegie employes, under the supervision of Dr. Frank P. Hossiter, worked more than an hour to resuscitate the victims.

Thomas Dunn made his way through the crowd after police asked if persons present knew anyone who had been out in a canoe. He burst into tears as he identified the bodies.

The death of Andrew Dunn, the son of James Dunn, a locomotive engineer at the Carrie Furnaces, was the second in the family within six weeks. His mother, Mrs. Josephine Fisher Dunn, died from a heart attack.

WALPOLE TO AID DICKENS FILM

NEW YORK, June 12.—(AP.)—Hugh Walpole, the novelist, and England's latest contribution to Hollywood, arrived today on the liner Ile De France.

He is en route to the cinema capital to assist in the screen production of Charles Dickens' book, "David Copperfield," explaining:

"My part is to help make the picture as English at it can be made; to keep the English color of it."

Walpole considered it splendid that motion picture producers were concentrating more on actual stories saying:

"I think that now the cinema is ready to do more difficult things, and if the authors are given a free hand, I think they can do something really useful for the films."

Sabath Retains Faith in Marriage

CHICAGO, June 12.—(AP.)—Judge Joseph Sabath's faith in marriage remains unshaken. He completed his twenty-fifth year on the bench yesterday. In that time more than 41,000 couples have told him their marital troubles. Still the famous jurist believes firmly in the institution of marriage. He said:

"I hold that marriage can be successful if each party recognizes the rights of the other party and respects them."

Mother of Quintuplet Boys Born 38 Years Ago Blames Too Much Handling for Death of Sons

Hopes to See Dionne Girls; Has Advice For Parents

KEVIL, Ky., June 12.—(AP.)—The mother of five quintuplet boys born 38 years ago at Mayfield, Ky., rolled back the years today to recall the time when the world was talking about her babies, those babies, she said with a note of pain, who were killed by "too many people."

The woman is Mrs. Elizabeth Lyon, 78, who lives near here with a son, Marion Lyon. She bore 13 children, four of whom are still living. The quintuplets died one by one after five days. The sturdiest of the five, John, lived to be 14 days old.

Mrs. Lyon blamed "those crowds," who swarmed to their humble home and handled the babies, for their early death. She said:

"I'm going to write to this mother in Canada tomorrow and tell her what to do. I'm going to tell her to keep everybody away from those babies of hers; if she doesn't she will lose them all. But I don't think the doctor will let anybody touch them."

HOPES TO VISIT DIONNES

Mrs. Lyon expressed a keen desire to go to Corbeil, Ont.

She produced from a closet a large picture, time-worn and water-smeared, but showing the quintuplets, all in the long baby clothes of their day. With a smile of pride she pointed them out, one by one, adding:

"I'm the only one who could ever tell them apart. Here's Matthew, he weighed 5 pounds. Mark weighed 4½ and Luke here, 4¼. John only weighed 4, but Paul weighed 5½."

In a dream, Mrs. Lyon said, she was forewarned that she would have not one, but many babies.

"I'd had a dream and in that dream I knew I was going to have a lot of babies this time—I knew it because the names I would give them came to me. Not one or two names, but five. The names? Matthew, Mark, Luke, John and Paul. So I knew I was going to have a lot of babies.

GUARD ABOUT HOUSE

"It was those crowds, those thousands who swarmed all over my place, in my house and handled those babies. Of course they couldn't live.

"It got so bad before my babies died that the Sheriff—I forgot his name—had to put officers all around the house and not let anybody bother us."

The doctor who attended Mrs. Lyon was Dr. S. J. Matthews, of Mayfield, now dead.

Until the quintuplets arrived in the home of the Dionnes the Lyon babies had liver longer than any other quintuplets. Medical histories record only 31 such births.

Mr. Lyon was French. Mrs. Lyon was of Dutch and Irish descent.

5 BABY GIRLS IMPROVING

CORBEIL, Ontario, June 12.—(AP.)—The tiny Dionne quintuplets, now on their third week in the world, were reported today to be progressing satisfactorily.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the country physician who has attended the five sisters since their birth 15 days ago, refused to become alarmed when it was revealed four of them have lost weight since Sunday. He said:

"I can safely say they are much improved in comparison with a week ago."

Their total weight dropped from 10 pounds 11¾ ounces to 10 pounds 8½ ounces. Only Marie, the smallest, showed a gain. She now weighs 28 ounces.

The stream of visitors to the farm has dropped off since Sunday, when the wagon road from Callander was crowded with automobiles.

QUADRUPLETS IN INCUBATORS

SAC CITY, Ia., June 12.—(AP.)—The Wycoff quadruplets are thriving today on a diet of corn syrup and milk in makeshift incubators improvised by the attending physician, which have been removed to his home.

Dr. G. H. Swearingen, who delivered the four tiny infants, said the babies are showing marked improvement and indicated that he would probably weigh them during the day. They have not been weighed since shortly after birth Saturday.

Gifts of food and clothing which will enable the father, Larry, to stretch his $16 a week salary to provide care for his children poured in upon the Sac County highway worker. Arrival of the quadruplets Saturday increased the number of his children to nine.

4 Keys, Now 19, Send Invitation To Quintuplets

HOLLIS, Okla., June 12.—(AP.)—Mary, Mona, Leota and Roberta Keys, now 19 and the only quadruplets in recent history known to have reached maturity, sent greetings today to the Dionne quintuplets in Canada.

Sending their "enthusiastic congratulations," the Keys foursome said:

We can wish them no fuller happiness than has been ours always. We wish them happy, useful, normal lives. Normal lives will be the most difficult of all problems to achieve. Many handicaps will come, but more than enough thrills to offset.

"Like our parents, we would have a wand and start the quintuplets off with the benefit of our experience.

"We invite the new arrivals to visit us in Hollis."

BOMBING ROUTS 200 DANCERS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 12.—Two more bombings during the night marked the violence that has been simmering for months in the coke region.

One dynamite blast set off at Edenborn was heard in Uniontown, 15 miles away.

The bomb was set off in a field a short distance from a hall at Edenborn in which 200 were attending a dance.

As the blast let go, the merrymakers fled from the hall in a panic.

Houses in the town were rocked and windows shattered.

The other bomb was set off at the home of Cliff Rhodes at Juniata. Rhodes, his wife and a child were hurled from bed as the explosion wrecked the rear of the dwelling.

Thomas McDonough, 25, a deputy sheriff, of Collier, is in the Uniontown Hospital as the result of a beating he received from a mob while he was passing through Amend yesterday.

WIFE SUES SLIM FOR ALIMONY

LOS ANGELES, June 12.—(AP.)—Because, she says, "Slim" Somerville carries his romancing from the screen into real life, his wife sought a $3,600 monthly allowance in a separate maintenance action today.

The film comedian "visited other women in Mexican and mountain resorts," Gertrude M. Somerville charged in her action, and gave "cash gifts totaling $2,000" to an unnamed Hollywood woman.

She said the actor, whose real name is George J. Somerville, is capable of earning $100,000 a year and their community property is worth $190,000. In addition to the $3,600 a month for support of herself and their 2½-year-old son, she asked $5,000 attorney's fees.

The couple was married November 21, 1927, and separated last January.

$50,000 BALM ASKED IN SUIT BY GIRL

Breach of Promise To Wed, Charged to Edgeworth Man

Betty Sillenburg, 713 Cedar avenue, who alleges that David C. Anderson, 307 Meadow lane, Edgeworth, spurned her love and married another, has filed suit for $50,000 damages for his failure to marry her.

The plaintiff avers that he visited her from December 1, 1926, and later at the defendant's residence proposed marriage and that she accepted him. She alleges that the wedding date was fixed June 3 and that she was to meet him in Boston to be married. According to her claims, Anderson told her to go back home and wait. August 1, 1930, was then, she says, fixed as the time for the marriage, resulting in another postponement until August 18, which was again postponed.

Miss Sillenburg again fixed the date for June 13 following, but again she says it was postponed, Anderson alleging he had to go to Boston. She claims he continued to delay the ceremony and that finally on March 31 last he married Sarah Neal. Her attorney is Joseph A. Robb.

MEXICAN COAST AWAITS GALE

TAMPICO, Mexico, June 12.—(AP.)—The entire Mexican coast along the Gulf of Mexico dug in today against an approaching hurricane, while El Salvador and Honduras counted nearly 3,000 deaths from last week's storms.

Warnings were issued from the Texas border to Vera Cruz as the storm moved in with nerve-wracking slowness. So wide was its area that fears were held it might strike Texas.

The Red Cross, hospitals and police in Tampico prepared for emergencies. Bus fleets are organized to carry residents from places of danger.

Latest advices said the hurricane was about 100 miles off Tampico and was moving toward the shore at about 20 miles an hour.

Dispatches from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, said the entire town of Ocotepeque, near the Guatemala border was wiped out by floods, and more than 500 persons were drowned.

RENEW SEARCH FOR CHILD

SHARON, Pa., June 12.—(AP.)—An appeal for volunteers to make another hunt through the woods and hills near Sharon in an effort to find the missing Leah Minerva Dilley was made today by the child's father, George Dilley.

Still without a clue to the whereabouts of the 4-year-old girl, police were joined in their investigation by state police from the Mercer barracks. County Detective Sam Leyshock also is taking part.

Meanwhile, the eight-day search for Leah Minerva Dilley, 4 is at a standstill, while police await "new clues" to the girl's whereabouts.

Police Chief Charles Steger said last night:

"We have not dropped the case, but we will need something new to solve it."

The girl was last seen playing Sunday a week ago.

Wets and Drys Pull Hair Over River Swim Ban

Fighting and hairpulling, police reported, attended a decision of Tarentum Council last night to ban bathing at "Depression Beach" in the Allegheny River.

Rival factions of property owners appeared before Council. One group urged permitting persons to bathe with consent of the property holders who have control of the beach to the low water mark.

Others contended that improper language, immodest bathing suits and disorderly conduct made immediate closing of the beach by all owners of property in "Depression Beach" imperative.

One woman grew hysterical during the arguments and was led out.

Council finally passed a motion banning all bathing at the beach.

After the meeting the rival groups opened hostilities in front of the Municipal Building, with both women and men participating. There were no arrests.

Clubwomen Tell 8 Ways To Tidy City Streets

Eight ways to help make Pittsburgh a cleaner city were urged yesterday by the committee of the Congress of Women's Clubs in an appeal for public co-operation. They asked:

"The committee realizes that much of the litter and unsightliness of our streets is due largely to thoughtlessness and indifference, therefore we desire to enlist every citizen in the task of making Pittsburgh a clean city."

The committee's eight points:

Throw no paper of any kind on the streets.

Crush—never tear—paper; small bits are hard to gather.

Carry cigaret and tobacco containers to waste paper receptacles.

Deposit coverings of chewing gum or candy in waste paper receptacles.

Keep litter removed from your homes.

Leave no paper or rubbish in parks.

Urge children to take pride in conditions or streets around homes and schools.

Report to the Bureau of Highways any district that is dropping rubbish or garbage on streets.

BERGDOLL PLEA FOR PARDON IGNORED

WEINSBERG, Germany, June 12.—(AP.)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, Philadelphia draft dodger, said today his offer to surrender to a civil court has been met with silence by the American government, but that he has received "a flood of letters of sympathy.

Bergdoll, who calls himself "a man without a country," following his escape from military authorities in 1920, appealed to President Roosevelt in March for a pardon. He said he would not face a military courtmartial. Bergdoll is living here in exile with his wife and four children. Bergdoll said:

"My mail from all parts of America has been enormous. More than 90 per cent were favorably inclined so far as my pardon is concerned. It seems from these, though, that my friends are in middle-sized to small cities and farming districts. The few dissenting editorials all came from the largest cities."

LOYAL TO FAMILY

Asked whether he might undertake to return to America without a pardon, Bergdoll replied:

"As the father of four young children I could never consider returning to the United States and surrendering to a court-martial. A court-martial can hand out any kind of sentence. It might give me 10 years or even life.

"I would be a fine specimen of humanity to heap such disgrace and trouble on the heads of my wife and children. Yet if I were the young, single and care-free fellow of long ago I might consider such a proposition, but under the existing circumstances such a thing is unthinkable.

"If I did such a disgraceful thing I would deserve a life sentence."

WAITS REPLY

Tracing the history of efforts to secure a pardon, the exile said:

"My mother made her plea to President Roosevelt in January. Very many well-wishers then wrote the President in my behalf.

"These writers received replies from a pardon attorney of the Department of Justice, who stated 'Mr. Bergdoll has not asked a pardon.' Thereupon these people forwarded their replies to me with the statement that the Department of Justice's reply practically indicated I would be pardoned if I made a personal appeal to the President.

"This I did. Mr. Roosevelt was the first President I considered possessing enough courage to grant me a pardon. Then more people wrote the President and the Department of Justice, but since then no reply has been received by any writers so far as I know."

BAR TO PROBE FEE CHARGES

A complaint against the claim of attorneys for fees in a condemnation proceeding resulting from county road work at Large was being investigated today by a committee appointed by the courts.

Residents of Large brought the complaint after they had entered into a written contract with two attorneys for payment to them of a portion of the amount the residents received from condemnation of their property.

W. W. Stoner, president of the Allegheny County Bar Association, said he had received the complaint orally, and that it had been referred to the committee appointed by the courts for investigation.

Father and Son Held in Lottery

Father and son were held for court today in Central Police Court, accused of operating a suit club as a lottery. They were listed as Jacob T. Gregory, 65, of the Roosevelt Hotel, and Ollie H. Gregory, 43, of Brownsville road. Police and a representative of the Better Business Bureau testified the defendants used United States Treasury figures as the basis of the lottery and frequently gave out inferior suits.

REDS WORKING TO UNDERMINE U. S. NAVY

(Editor's Note—Coincidental with announcement in the British House of Commons that Communist propagandists are active within the British army and navy, discovery has been made that Communist agitators are working in New York to undermine the loyalty of the United States Navy. The following article explains one of the methods used by the agitators.)

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 12.—It isn't "Hey, sailor!" . . . It's "Heh-hey, sailor, hot-cha" that gets the boys from the fleet.

And no one knows this better today than the "agitprop."

Oh, didn't you know what the agitprop is? Well, it's the Soviet-ized contraction of Agitation and Propaganda Committee of the Communist Party.

Red leaders in New York greeted with joy the news that Uncle Sam's battle fleet was coming to New York. With the sailors "on the beach" it made things easier for the agitprop. The result bears out the calculations of the agitprop.

TONS OF PROPAGANDA

Tons of Communist propaganda were printed especially for sailor consumption. The waterfront along the Hudson, where the fleet is anchored, is full of "comrades" looking for lonely sailors. The boys from the fleet were invited to a free showing of the Soviet film "Potemkin" at Finnish Hall in Harlem; admission to patrons not in naval uniform is 10 cents.

But most effective have been the invitations to parties.

At a party given last night by the "comrades" for the boys from the fleet, there were about 100 dancing in the bare loft of a lower East Side office building. There were 10 sailors present. Two of them were chief petty officers, the girls, assigned to the task, had picked them up around town.

The sailor boys were having a swell time . . . Liquor, gals and music. The sky was the roof as far as the sailors were concerned.

LOADED WITH LEAFLETS

And before the gobs left they were loaded down with anti-war leaflets, broadsides on "class consciousness" and poems against war. One of the poems contains these lines:

"Stand by the flag; the lie that still allures,
Lay down your lives for land you do not own
And give unto a war that is not yours
Your gory tithe of mangled flesh and bone."

New York is a hard town to keep propagandists from getting at either the Army or Navy.

Three Men Arrested In Raid on Hill

Three men were arrested and moonshine seized in a raid in Chatham street last night, according to police.

Those held were Ed Campbell, charged with violating the liquor laws and keeping a disorderly house; Louis Smith, 73½ Beltzhoover avenue, and Adam Sands, 1419 Dixon street.

Reserve Traffic In Market Street

Effective tomorrow, Market street will be reversed in direction. Fifth avenue will be made one-way between Liberty and Penn avenues and Evans way will be made one-way between Duquesne way and Liberty avenue for 60-day trial periods. Left turns will also be prohibited from Fifth avenue and Liberty avenue into Market street for the trial period.

In Paris

Jane Eads

Universal Service.

PARIS, June 12.—Dr. Charles A. Holder, whose second wife is the widow of Enrico Caruso, famous opera tenor, learned today that absence only made the heart of his daughter, Margaretta, grow fonder of that brilliant young Egyptian he sent her to the United States to forget.

For Peggy returned last week from New York, where her family is listed in the social register, and a few hours after landing shipped from her father's place at Fontainebleau and married J. S. Kandelaffe, who is an international lawyer and a Knight of the Legion of Honor. Where the couple is now not even Papa Holder knows. He is nursing his anger but Peggy has an ally in her stepmother, the former Dorothy Caruso, who is trying to smooth everything over.

MRS. FREDDY PROCTER

There is plenty of static crackling back and forth across the channel. Sybil Stokes in Paris, and Frederick McCormack, one of the anti-headache powder heirs, in London, are each discreetly pretending icy indifference and yet are trying to get friends to bring them together.

A year ago in New York, Sybil and Freddy were the best of friends until for some reason or other he suddenly became the symbol of a headache to her and she packed off to Europe in a huff.

He was at the pier with roses asking her to change her mind, but she went on, reading in midsea of Freddy's marriage the night before to a Broadway actress.

Sybil is living with her sister Dorothy, who has her own troubles in planning a divorce from her husband, Freddy Procter, of the soap millions.

Best-dressed women of the week:

MRS. SCHIFF
Young, smart Mrs. J. Mortimer Schiff, . . . she wore a sailor costume . . . white duck;

At Cannes, Mrs. George F. Baker, of New York, on her husband's yacht, Viking, with her daughter, Mrs. J. Mortimer Schiff, both wearing sailor costumes of white duck, trimmed in blue with jaunty berets.

At the Chantilly race track, Princess Aymond De Faucigny Lucinge, the former Carolyn Foster, of New York, wearing black Marocain with a white satin tunic, a Marocain coat, silver foxes and a black straw hat. Mrs. William Littauer in an exotic white, red and yellow figured black foulard ensemble with a cape-line of black straw; Countess De Viel Castel, the former Anna Dillon Ripley, of New York, wearing flowered crepe de chine and a small white lacquered straw.

Because Mrs. Sands believes dreams, Capt. Mahlon A. Sands, of New York, has $125,000 more spending money today. Last winter a golfing partner of Sands dreamed he was at the Derby and saw a jockey wearing mauve cream colors dash to victory. Sands laughed, but Mrs. Sands got busy and found the nearest thing to be Windsor Boy, the Maharajah of Rajpipla's horse, wearing cream and purples.

That was close enough to mauve for Mrs. Sands. She induced the captain to bet on the winter books, with the odds 30 to 1.

Now Sands is singing that refrain: "Did you ever see a dream walking? Well, I did."

PRICE GOUGING ENCOURAGED BY NRA, DARROW CHARGES

SECRET CODE TAMPERING LAID TO 'BLUE EAGLE' IN LATEST REPORT

By DON EWING
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Startling charges that NRA has "secretly and surreptitously" altered its Blue Eagle codes between the time of their approval by industries and promulgation by President Roosevelt are contained in the second Darrow recovery review board report.

The board, headed by Clarence Darrow, charges that these alterations resulted in promotion of trusts and monopolies under the codes and left the consumer "defenseless" against price-gouging by big business.

The report was delivered to the President by Darrow Saturday. The President sent a copy to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator. The document will be made public later in the week.

Thirteen codes specifically are attacked in the 40,000-word document, a copy of which became available to Universal Service today.

AWAIT HEARINGS

A covering letter signed by Darrow declares that 1,080 persons are still awaiting hearings on complaints against 142 codes. In all, 27 codes have bene investigated by the board.

The report contained no repetition of the demand for socialization of industry as suggested by Darrow and William O. Thompson, board member, in a supplemental document of individual opinion attached to the first report.

The document bristles with a withering attack on NRA which rivals the onslaught of the first report. There is some praise for individual recovery officials.

The report specifically charges the general retail code, covering one million stores employing five million persons, and the boot and shoe industry code, were altered in NRA after being approved by the industry and before going to the President.

DEMOCRACY PERILED

The report says:

"We desire to enter our protests against the practice of surreptitiously altering codes drawn in the open. It is most unfair, unreasonable, arbitrary and autocratic. It clothes the administrator with the perilous power of an economic satrap. It cannot exist without tending to multiply the ascendancy of the large enterprise; it cannot exist without grave dangers to our democratic system."

Declaring such alteration "savors more of the method of military encampment than of legitimate business," the board says of the alleged retail code secret changes:

"The sinister changes made in this code, without warrant, without resubmission to the body that made the code, without notice to the enterprise injuriously affected, constitute an arbitrary exercise of power that seems to demand searching inquiry on even graver grounds than those of economic justice."

CODE CHANGED

Again referring to the retail code, the report declares:

"The code as drawn and adopted was not the code that was sent by the administrator of the NRA to the President of the United States to become the guiding law of the trade. It was not the code that ever since has been in operation."

Besides the scathing denunciation of the retail and shoe codes, the report lambastes the codes covering cement, lumber and nine other industries, declares trusts caused Darrow board witnesses to change testimony, and denounces high salaries paid to members of code authorities.

Removal from office of the executive secretary of the lumber code authority is demanded, while recent code changes announced by Johnson are praised. The report says of the abandoning of price-fixing in codes:

"Millions of our distressed fellow-citizens will be cheered with new hope to learn that the complaints we recorded are to be diminished."

NRA is bitterly denounced for not taking such action when it received the first Darrow report.

Secretary Ickes was praised for his efforts to regulate the petroleum industry. The industry, however, was declared to be in deplorable condition. Passage of legislation giving Ickes full power to set production quotas was urged.

In the lumber industry, the report suggested that if monopoly is essential, the government should take control of it.

Spread of Dock Strike To Atlantic Seen

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—(AP.)—Renewed threats of a "fight to the finish" added tenseness to the Pacific Coast's prolonged maritime workers' strike today.

Leaders of the 25,000 striking longshoremen, seamen and allied workers declared "the fighting spirit of the men is undiminished despite efforts to split their ranks." The longshoremen's strike committee here called for a general strike of all trade unions and Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said the walkout may spread to Atlantic ports.

Holiday Fought As 'Calamity' In McKeesport

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

McKEESPORT, Pa., June 12.—Business is picking up at a fast clip in the "steel town" of McKeesport where payrolls in the mills will hit around the $1,000,000 mark this week—the highest in several years.

"That's why a steel strike at this time would be a calamity."

So declared C. R. Shaw, president of the First National Bank, in an interview today.

Other business and civic leaders expressed a similar opinion. Watson McKee, secretary of the McKeesport Chamber of Commerce, who last week led a delegation to Washington to protest against the strike, said a walkout would "mean the collapse of our industries just when we are getting going again."

The payrolls in the major industries of McKeesport are assuming almost prosperity dimensions. Today the National Tube Company's national works here was scheduled to distribute a payroll of $313,000 to 5,500 employes.

Next Saturday the McKeesport Tin Plate Company will have a payroll of $210,000, the highest since 1931. Payrolls in the other mills, including the W. Dewees Wood works of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, bring the week's total payrolls of the mills in the McKeesport district up to close to $1,000,000, which means that, locally, "happy days are here again."

Shaw flatly asserted:

"A steel strike would retard President Roosevelt's economic recovery program more than anything I can think of.

"You don't hear the people in McKeesport talking strike. They don't want it. The men want to work. They've had enough of a holiday."

State Senator W. D. Mansfield, editor of the McKeesport Daily News, said he did not believe there would be a strike here because:

"More than 90 per cent of the workers in this district have expressed themselves as against it.

"There is no dispute here about wages, or about hours of work, or about working conditions. The men want to work and their families want them to work."

McKee said that 89 8-10 per cent of the men in the National Tube Works here opposed the strike in a secret ballot taken recently. He added:

"The workers here don't want a strike—they want pay checks."

WHITE HOUSE SIFTS STEEL DISPUTE

or Saturday to enable the President to act.

After yesterday's White House session, Senator Wagner expressed confidence the strike would be averted. Others conferring at the White House were Johnson, Donald Richberg, general counsel to NRA, and Charles Wyzanski, solicitor for the Labor Department.

Johnson was uncertain whether he would attend a meeting of steel workers in Pittsburgh Thursday, called to decide definitely about the strike.

Richberg, meanwhile, made plans to attend the regular meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute Thursday in New York.

A plan for a three-man peace board has been approved by Johnson and the American Iron and Steel Institute, but attacked by leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, who maintain the steel companies have violated the NRA's collective bargaining provisions.

Johnson today maintained the plan is "admirable and workable."

At a press conference Johnson said no replies had been received to his request for suggestions to improve on the proposal.

Johnson, Senator Wagner and others were disclosed today to be working on some undescribed "new legislation."

The NRA chief only smiled when asked if it was a substitute for the Wagner labor board bill.

Gary Steel Workers Firm for Recognition

GARY, Ind., June 12.—(AP.)—Union steel workers in the Calumet district have instructed delegates to the Pittsburgh conference to accept nothing less than union recognition by the steel companies.

Lodges of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, numbering 23 in the district, and said to have a membership of 48,000, started calling their instruction meetings last night.

Union officials expressed reluctance to call the strike, or "holiday" as they prefer, but said there was no doubt on the attitude of the workers.

Wives of union toilers displayed pessimistic attitudes regarding the strike. Grocery stores in the affected areas—Gary, East Chicago and Indiana Harbor—reported a business boom yesterday as the women laid in heavy supplies in anticipation of a long period without income.

Steel companies were reported erecting floodlights, commissaries and dormitories inside the plants.

WAY TO AVERT STEEL STRIKE SEEN HERE

The possibility that a way will be found to avert the threatened steel strike appeared today as delegates prepared to meet in Pittsburgh Thursday for the special convention of Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Michael F. Tighe, veteran president of the Amalgamated, pointed out that the delegates were empowered to discuss whether a holiday, or strike, is the method necessary to achieve the union's objective—recognition. Tighe added that he favored a strike—if it is necessary.

And from Youngstown, O., came a statement from Clarence Irwin, chairman of the Amalgamated's Sixth District, that he doubted whether the Amalgamated would insist upon a closed shop if the steel companies recognize their union.

M'NAIR TAKES HAND

Mayor McNair took a hand in things today by issuing this statement:

"In past labor disturbances the executives in charge of the city, having for their major consideration their political futures, have been over-awed by minority groups who threatened retaliation, if not given special privileges.

"As I have little consideration for my political future, it shall be my endeavor, in case a steel strike is called in our city, to give no special privilege and to face the situation from the clear, legal standpoint, both as to the rights of employer and employe.

"To my mind, the persons most inconvenienced by a strike will be our citizens. In view of this fact, I desire to state that all the streets and byways of the city, whether in the vicinity of our mills or not, will be kept free for pedestrians.

RIGHTS OF PEOPLE

"The people have a right to walk in safety in our streets and no groups of persons, merely because they belong to labor unions, or so-called regular unions or any other unions, will be permitted to congregate in the vicinity of the mills or factories, or to raise disturbances that may result in physical violence to the passerby.

"Further, every citizen, desiring to work in his customary place of employment, will be given protection in passing along the streets to and fro, and he will be allowed to enter the plants and go therefrom unmolested by other individuals.

"This looks to me like a conflict between various factions in a very small group of workers in our city. As I said before, there are no great issues involved and, if the people want to stage a conflict, they will not be allowed to do so in our city. The police will preserve order and they will protect our citizens in the ordinary conduct of their affairs."

McNair declared he would not permit massed picketing. He said:

"There can be all the picketing they want, but it must be orderly."

Asked if massed picketing would be allowed, he replied:

"No."

Mills in Protest On State Buying; 1,200 Idle

RIDGEWAY, Pa., June 12.—(AP.)—Twelve hundred employes of the Elk Tanning Company are workless today because company officials closed their five Pennsylvania plants in protest against state shoe contracts being let to "foreign" firms.

The men were employed in plants at Emporium, Coudersport, Clearfield, Wilcox and Ridgewood. Officials of the J. K. Mosser Leather Company said they would curtail operations from 10 to 65 per cent in plants in St. Marys, North Bend, Westover, Newberry and Noxen.

Officials of the companies charged the state relief board with contracting for the purchase of more than 1,000,000 pairs of shoes for 300,000 needy Pennsylvanians from firms in other states.

TIEUP AVERTED ON MINES JOB

Threat of a tieup on the $100,000 addition to the United States Bureau of Mines was averted late yesterday at the close of a hearing on complaints filed by a committee named by the Pittsburgh Building Trades Council through Joseph H. Duty, president. Announcement was made by Miss Emmelinne Pitt, commissioner of the United States Department of Labor.

The committee alleged that two contractors were paying less than the prevailing union scale of wages required on government projects. It was composed of Matt Gorman, of the Structural Iron Workers' Union; Nicholas Grady, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Thomas Kinsella, Steamfitters Union; Andrew Enoch, Building Laborers' Union, and P. J. Dagnall, business agent of the Hoisting Engineers' Union.

Miss Pitt expected to confer today with representatives of the Babcock-Wilcox Company, contractors, which has a $17,000 contract for installing boilers, and the John F. Casey Company, which has the contract for excavating and foundation work.

Steel Group Sets Up Fellowship at Lehigh

NEW YORK, June 12.—(AP.)—The American Institute of Steel Construction announced today the endowment of a two-year research fellowship at Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa. The subject of study will be various aspects of steel floor construction and will be carried out under Prof. Inge Lyse, of the department of civil engineering.

KNICKERBOCKER FINDS BRITAIN LIVING BETTER THAN EVER

UPPER CLASSES ENJOYING MORE LUXURIES WHILE SUPPORTING 2 MILLION

Editor's Note—An investigation reveals that while prices for luxuries are high in Great Britain, the Britons are buying freely because they are making money, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the second article of his series on "British Recovery."

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

LONDON, June 12.—Peaches sell in Piccadilly for $1.90 apiece. If you want to buy them you must get up early. The best are soon sold out and then you can only get the next best for $1.65 apiece.

Britons buy them at these prices. For Britons are making money.

Go into the shop of Blank and Blank, purveyors to His Majesty, the King. They have a large establishment on Piccadilly with the entire first floor front devoted to delicate foods for the ladies and gentlemen of the West End. Ask for peaches.

"Here is a very nice peach," responds the salesgirl, displaying a mediocre little fruit about half the size of a full grown Georgia or Alberta peach. She adds:

"These are $1.65 each. I'm sorry, but our best peaches are sold out. We will have some more tomorrow. Yes, $1.90 apiece. The best British peaches, but they are soon gone. It would be wise to order in advance."

BERRIES 25 CENTS EACH

Here, too, are strawberries at a guinea a box. A guinea is $5.25. The box holds 25 strawberries. This makes the price a little over 25 cents a strawberry.

There are also alligator pears at $1.25 apiece, and melons, smaller than a grapefruit, for $3.25 apiece.

These prices may be duplicated perhaps elsewhere in the world, but it is doubtful if the number of customers at these prices could be duplicated. The shops are crowded and the delivery wagons of Blank & Blank are busy all day long unloading hampers at the tradesmen's entrances of West End houses.

It is spring, and the young man's fancy may turn to giving candy. No Mayfair buck would buy except at a certain shop in Bond street, where they pack each piece of candy separately with a number and a name.

The cost is $3 a pound, but there it would be well to send a messenger because the crush of customers is so great it may take 15 or 20 minutes to complete the purchase.

ORDERS CARS IN ADVANCE

Britons, however, are accustomed to waiting for their good things. When a boy is born the doctor has hardly left the house before the father writes in to Eton with an application to admit his son. It will be 13 years before the boy is old enough to go to Eton, but 13 years on the waiting list is the minimum for entrance.

Just so Britons today are ordering their automobiles. For the best British made car, costing a minimum of $12,500, it is necessary to get on a waiting list. The quickest deliveries this company has been able to make in the last year have been six months from the time of ordering. This, however, is very exceptional, and the average wait is a year.

In order to avoid this, as the salesman in a Bond street showroom explained:

"Our customers usually, when they buy a car, tell us to put them down for the same car again two years later. So just yesterday a gentleman finally got his car—it was a $15,000 model—and he gave me at once an order for another like it in 1936."

Near this showroom was a tobacconist. In his window was a fat cedar box ticketed 75 guineas. Seventy-five guineas are $393.70. The cedar box contained 100 cigars. Each cigar cost $3.93.

TRAVELING BAGS $2,000

Next door was a firm dealing in traveling bags. One bag, a gentleman's fitted case, was priced $1,200. However, the salesman was able to produce a better one for $1,977.50.

Perhaps the best index of Mayfair opulence is to be found in a certain linen store on Bond street. There the salesman was asked to show his best men's handkerchiefs. He produced an article of the ordinary size, hemstitched. It was, he explained, handwoven. No machine could handle such fine threads. One could read a newspaper through it. It cost $10.

I asked the salesman:

"When did you last sell any of these?"

He replied with that air of hauteur that only a Bond street salesman can evince:

"Oh, a gentleman just yesterday placed an order with us for $1,000 worth of these handkerchiefs."

WOMEN OUTSPEND MEN

But British gentlemen are not the principal buyers in Mayfair. British ladies buy better. This is the London season. It opens with the Covent Garden opera April 30, and it ends with a royal garden party July 12.

To go to court a lady must wear a uniform just as precisely specified as those of the gentlemen. It consists of a court dress, cut somewhat severely and according to a style that would be approved by Her Majesty the Queen; a train, a cloak, an odd headdress with feathers which do not become every lady but must be worn; bouquet and so on.

A Bond street mode salon furnished figures for the minimum cost of dressing a lady to go to court. To do it as cheaply as possible would cost for the dress $200, cloak $150, feathers and headdress $40, bouquet $10, gloves $10, shoes $25, stockings $5, a total of $440.

Then comes at least $15 for beauty parlor and $25 for the hire of a motor car and $5 for tips, making a minimum of $485.

The Bond street authority explained:

"The actual average would run nearer a total of $1,000.

$500 FOR COURT ATTIRE

At the minimum, however, one may reckon a flat $500 a lady. Guests of Their Majesties at the four courts of the season number around 2,000 ladies. The cheapest valuation of the bare essential expenses of the clothing of these ladies is $1,000,000. But this, as Mayfair friends protested, is a ridiculous undervaluation.

A visit to the Blue Train Restaurant after court one night proved it. Prince George was there, and a party of friends, guests of the Marquis de Casa Mare. Feathered head dresses nodded all over the place. Ladies came in, and more ladies, until the last table was crowded. Mink was the poorest fur in sight and sable was as common as squirrel elsewhere.

The London newspapers print pages of description of what the ladies wear. Excluding the royal circle and the diplomatic corps, at one court around 44 ladies were thus minutely described. More than 100 wore jewels considered worth mentioning. Diamonds were favorite, with pearls and sapphires next. A qualified observer who knows his London well estimates that the figures $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 would be a fair range for the total sums expended by the ladies at the four courts of Their Majesties for their clothing and jewels alone.

175 BALLS AND 130 DINNERS

A calendar of the London season is issued. It contains only the most prominent events, and mentions the private parties of only those persons who have been presented at court. This limits it to only a small fraction of the number of social affairs which actually take place.

Nevertheless, for the 10 weeks of this season there are listed 175 formal balls and dances and 130 formal dinners. Guests at some of the balls number into the thousands. An average of 200 guests would be low. An attendance of 35,000 at the season's balls would be a reasonable estimate.

All these are evidences of the prosperity of the upper classes. In no country in the western world is the line of distinction between upper and lower classes so sharply drawn as in England. But how are the lower classes, how are the people faring in Britain's comeback?

2 MONTHS FOR PINT

A magistrate near Manchester has just sentenced a 60-year-old woman to two months in the workhouse for stealing a pint of milk. The old woman declared she had been seized with a fainting spell. The magistrate said he regretted but he was compelled to impose sentence.

Is this typical of British social justice? It is not. True, while Mayfair buys peaches at $1.90 each the authorities concerned with unemployment have just established that it ought not to cost more than $1.38 to provide the food for one unemployed man for a week.

But for the last two decades Britain has supported its unemployed on a higher standard of living than the jobless in any other country. Today despite the comeback there are still around 2,200,000 unemployed. They are all being given a dole which certainly suffices for their existence, and which has sufficed to keep them quieter than in any other country during the world economic depression. Britain's recipe for treating the jobless is worth further consideration.

NEAR PEAK IN JOBS

But the unemployed are only a little more than 2,000,000. The employed workers number today 10,140,000. In the boom year 1929 they numbered 10,220,000. Britain is giving employment today to virtually the same number as in the most prosperous postwar year.

Today the position is such that the excess of unemployed in 1934 over 1929 is largely to be ascribed to the increase in population. Judged from the standard of the number of people at work, Britain will have come back completely only when she has given work to the surplus.

But how are the vast majority, the people with jobs, faring under British recovery? Since 1929 the cost of living has gone down in Britain from an index of 160 to an index of 140 taking 1914 as 100. Money wages have declined an infinitesimal two per cent since 1929, but measured in purchasing power, real wages have gone up to 120, taking 1924 as 100, and the statistics of the ministry of labor as authority.

BETTER OFF THAN IN 1929

Hence the man at work in Britain today, granted that he has as much work to do, is actualy better off than he was in 1929. The jobless man is being supported at a tolerable minimum of existance. The upper classes are living luxuriously.

Where is the money coming from? What are the sources of the British wealth which, in this second year of recovery, already permits a few to live extremely well, the vast majority to live better than they did in 1929, and at the same time support more than 2,000,000 jobless? In the following articles an attempet will be made to trace the course of the British comeback.

FRANCE VOTES FOURTH DEBT DEFAULT

PARIS, June 12. — (AP.) — France formally declined today to make her fourth war debts default to the United States in a note approved by the cabinet.

Edouard Herriot, minister without portfolio and formmer premier, who has steadfastly supported payment as a point of honor, voted with the minority.

A note will be cabled to Washington tonight for delivery to Secretary of State Cordell Hull. The note probably will be presented tomorrow, but the action may be deferred until noon Friday, the exact hour the money is payable.

In the presence of President Albert Lebrun the debt problem was fully discussed.

Although Herriot, it was announced, remained "faithful to his position," the overwhelming decision was "to maintain the stand" Parliament took December 14, 1932, when the Herriot government was overthrown on a proposal to pay.

The former Premier alone spoke for payment, asserting "we must reach a settlement." All of those who had been inclined previously to follow him approved the default today, since Great Britain refused to make even a token payment.

'Clearing Fund' Holiday Declared by Germany

BERLIN, June 12.—(AP.)—While most foreign observers look upon Germany's financial future as heading into a blind alley, it was made plain today that Germany herself intends to emphasize her importance in world commerce in an effort to obtain the co-operation of the rest of the the world in a different situation.

The stopping for 14 days of "clearing funds" arrangements with leading banks, which means that payments on commercial accounts will not be made during that period, was regarded here as calling attention to the fact that world trade must co-operate if any sort of debt payment is to be expected from Germany.

Throughout discussions of foreign payments, made difficult by the dwindling supply of foreign exchange, emphasis has been placed by Reichsbank and other officials on Germany's claim for a greater export trade.

HARVARD SCANS NAZI'S GIFT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 12.—(AP.)—Havard University will probably await the arrival of Ernst Hanfstaengl, intimate friend of Chancellor Hitler, before reaching a decision on Hanfstaengl's gift of $1,000. This course was announced today by a spokesman for the university as word was received that Hanfstaengl was en route to Cambridge to attend the twenty-fifth reunion of his class.

Hanfstaengl was reported to have flown in a mail plane from Cologne to Cherbourg, there to embark on the S. S. Europa.

A Harvard spokesman said the terms of Hanfstaengl's gift conflicted with the rules of the corporation, which do not permit the name of a donor to be attached to a class gift. When Hanfstaengl deposited the money in a Berlin bank last week he said it was to be known as the "Hanfstaengl gift" and to be used to defray the educational expenses of the son of a member of the class of 1909 of which Hanfstaengl was a member.

DUCE SUMMONS ARMS EXPERTS

VENICE, June 12.—(AP.)—Italian disarmament experts will aid Premier Mussolini in his talks with Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, expected to begin Thursday in Venice.

Fulvio Suvich, under-secretary of state; Baron Pomeo Aloisi, vice president of the League of Nation's general ssembly; Italian delegates to the league, and Vittorio Cerruti, ambssador to Berlin, will constitute Il Duce's staff of advisers.

Italian delegates, with the exception of Mussolini, are expected in Venice tomorrow, indicating the conversations will probably begin the following day. The parley is expected to last two days.

Police are making unusual preparations for the meeting, at which Mussolini is to discuss the possibility of German's return to the World Disarmament Conference, now in adjournment until action is taken by Berlin.

BISHOP KILLING RE-ENACTED IN COURTROOM

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Courtroom spectators bowed their heads and made the sign of the cross today as the gold-embroidered vestments of Archbishop Leon Tourian, blood-stained and knife-slashed, were brought into general sessions where nine men are on trial for the murder of the Armenian prelate, killed Christmas Eve as he bore the cross up th aisle of the church.

Only one of the defendants, Matios Leylegian, is charged with the actual stabbing, but the prosecutor will seek to show that all the defendants were directly connected with the slaying.

DESCRIBES STABBING

First witness for the state, Sarkis Demurjian, deacon of the Holy Cross Armenian Church and an eyewitness of the slaying, testified that Martin Mozian, one of the defendants, had made threats against the uprimate's life six months before the fatal stabbing.

From the stand, Demurjian told the story of the murder as he saw it. He said he was walking behind the archbishop in the procession at the time of the slaying. He said he saw Leylegian and another of the defendants, Nishan Sarkisian, rise in a front pew. Then the archbishop fell. Demurjian said he saw a blood-stained knife in the aisle.

SLAYING RE-ENACTED

At the request of the jury, the scene was re-enacted with the assistant district attorney playing the role of the murdered man and a court attendant acting for Sarkisian. Demurjian became so excited in his acting that he lost command of his English and had to give directions through an interpreter.

The clean Center Leaves are the mildest leaves
They Taste Better!

We like telling you that Luckies are made of only clean center leaves. For the clean center leaves are the mildest leaves—they cost more—they taste better. And we're proud of the fact that these choice tobaccos receive the benefit of Lucky Strike's famous process—"It's toasted" for throat protection. But here's a point that's just as impressive: Luckies are round, firm, fully-packed with long golden strands of fine tobacco—no loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out. Truly, Luckies are all-ways kind to your throat.

DOCTORS SCAN 'NEW DEAL' NEEDS

CLEVELAND, June 12.—(AP.)—The place of the phsician in the "New Deal" came prominentl before the American Medical Association toda. when the house of delegates urged that ever state and federal relief commission include at least one phsician.

In approving a resolution to that effect, the house—the association's legislative bod—observed that an public commission for the relief of the destitute should have a physician among its personnel.

The house took occasion simultaneously to point out that the Federal Emergency Relief Administration has preserved the freedom of choice of physicians by those on relief rolls. The FERA also has recognized that "only the medical profession may properly evaluate medical services," the house asserted.

Highly important professionally was an amendment to the principles of ethics of the association declaring it is unethical for any doctor to dispose of his services to a lay corporation for profit.

It was explained that some corporations have been formed and stock sold in them. Such corporations have retained physicians at a salary, and all profits above such retainers and other expenses go to the stockholders. Broadly speaking, the amendment is a blow at commercialization of medical care.

Just before the noon adjournment the delegates aimed a swift and direct criticism at the board of regents of the American College of Surgeons, which announced in Chicago recently a policy including a prepayment plan for medical care.

The resolution "condemned such tactics and this apparent attempt of the board of regents of the American College of Surgeons to dominate and control the nature of medical practice."

The resolution further requested the trustees of the A. M. A. to ask the board of regents of the College of Surgeons, who themselves are members of the A. M. A., to explain the action and "to justify the attempt by this small group within specialistic organization to legislate for all the medical profession of this country, truly represented by the A. M. A."

Dr. Morris Fishbein, spokesman for the A. M. A., said a large proportion of the house of delegates of the A. M. A., which passed the resolution unanimously, also are members of the College of Surgeons.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

Five Billion Dollar Allowance for Roosevelt 'Mild'

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The five billion dollar blanket expense allowance which Mr. Roosevelt is getting from Congress is rather mild in comparison with the allowance he originally tried to get.

Only a few Congressmen know about the incident and they are not telling. It happened in an executive session of the House subcommittee hearings on appropriations. If you dig through the hundreds of pages of those hearings, you will find a few paragraphs they forgot to cut out.

These show the original draft of the deficiency-relief bill contained a provision authorizing the President to spend all the loose money in the Treasury.

PLAN

The exact wording of the provision was:

"Provided further that any savings or unobligated balances in existing appropriations—be transferred to the purpose of the Fedeal Emegency Relief act of 1933."

The Congressmen's eyes bulged when they read that part of the bill handed to them by the executive branch of the government. Both Chairman Buchanan and Representative Bacon exclaimed that such a provision would be virtually limitless. The President could take any money which Congress had not specifically tied down and spend it almost as he wished under the broad authority of the 1933 relief act.

They asked the witness, Relief Director Harry Hopkins, whether that was the intent. The record does not show that the wise Mr. Hopkins ever answered.

At any rate the provision never saw the light of day. When the committee reported the bill, the language had been changed to read: "Provided further, that any savings or unobligated balances of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation" be given to Mr. Roosevelt.

That is a lot different from giving carte blanche to the whole Treasury.

FARM AUTHORITY

The experience of Congress with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration amendments was somewhat similar.

Chairman Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, was so suspicious of them that he kept them bottled in his committee for months, although he ordinarily plays ball with the Wallace-Tugwell group as much as he reasonably can. The language of the amendments was ambiguous. Few congressmen could tell for sure what they meant. They were toned down considerably before the present drive was started to get them passed.

Even now Senator Byrd and others are contending that the amendments give the Wallace-Tugwell group too much power.

REASON

These incidents disclose the general administration strategy. It is to get every possible authorization of power from Congress before adjournment.

The new dealers say they do not intend to use half the power. They are unquestionably sincere about that. They have an idea that they should be ready to meet any emregency during the congressional recess so Congress will not have to be called back, no matter what happens.

They recall, for instance, that they had a hard time finding the legal authority for the gold policy orginally. They had to dig back into an old statute for doubtful authority. They do not want that to happen again.

FOOLISHNESS

The high-minded statesmen who are giving their all to disarmament at Geneva have managed to conceal their real plight fairly well. They accomplish it by forever exuding hope.

You can get a better idea of their situation from a terse resume of a single day (June 4) at the steering committee meeting. It is taken from detailed diplomatic reports reaching our officials and follows:

The Russian Litvinoff proposes forgetting disarmament and concentrating on security pacts.

British Arthur Henderson brands the proposal as impossible and suggests concentration on getting Germany back.

French Minister Barthou jumps up and says that 14 states have requested that security be dominant and how does Mr. Henderson propose to get Germany back?

The American Davis says that even if 14 states are interested in security, there are more interested in disarmament, and that the conference is not in the security business. Britain and Sweden rush to the assistance of Davis.

Poland yawns and says if security is not discussed the conference might as well break up. Davis suggests that Henderson and League Secretary Avenol get together on what to do next. Henderson doubts the ability of two persons getting together and suggests a larger committee including France, Italy and Germany.

Italy and France immediataly decline to serve on such a committee and the meeting adjourns. No runs, no hits, no errors.

SHELL GAME

The roaring noise in the Labor Department lately is not due to the steel strike threat but to sea shells.

For a long time the news has been suppressed, but it is now out, that Labor Secretary Perkins' hobby is the collection of shells. She has many rare ones from far beaches. Once in awhile, when she has time, she takes them out and looks them over.

If questioned closely by friends, she will confess that she believes Mr. Roosevelt's hobby of collecting stamps is a rather dull business.

'State Medicine' Plan Urged by Mrs. Liveright

SCRANTON, Pa., June 12.—(INS.)—"State medicine" supported with federal funds was held forth today as a means of providing work for unemployed nurses and more work for doctors, by Mrs. Alice F. Liveright, state secretary of welfare.

Anticipating objections to such a plan from physicians opposed to "state medicine," Mrs. Liveright, in an address before the graduating class of the Scranton State Hospital School of Nursing last night, commented:

"Many of the physicians now accepting federal fees howl loudest in opposition to 'state medicine.'"

"Do women smokers realize what Old Gold's throat-ease means?"

asks Barbara Stanwyck

[OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1933]

Dear Miss Stanwyck:—

The fact that Old Gold is easy on the throat is important to every smoker . . . man or woman. It means that one may smoke Old Golds from sunup to sundown, without throat discomfort.

But Old Gold's smoothness has an additional appeal to women. The absence of artificial flavoring in Old Gold not only makes it a smoother smoke . . . but a cleaner smoke . . . less apt to stain the teeth or to leave objectionable odor in the clothes or on the breath.

We do not say that Old Gold is the only good cigarette for the fastidious woman smoker. But we do say there is no purer or finer cigarette made.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—The net of it is this, Miss Stanwyck: No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

'GIRL IN THE FAMILY'

John Doubts Depth of Susan's Affection for Wallace

By Beatrice Burton

Susan Meets and Finds Bond Between Herself And 'Paying Guest'

CHAPTER VIII.

When Wallace came to call, he and Susan usually sat in the little reception room just across the hall from the parlor. It was a cold-looking room with dark green wall paper and a green carpet. There was a square piano in one corner, and an old-fashioned whatnot loaded with family photographs in another. On the mantelpiece stood the tomb-like white clock that always whirred before it struck. The window curtains were much-mended Battenberg lace—relics of the glorious bygone days when the Brodericks had been able to buy real lace for their front windows.

At night the room was not so gloomy as it was in the day time. Especially on "Wallace nights" when Susan turned on the lamps and lit the fire in the brass-rodded grate.

At ten minutes to eight on this particular night when she went in to start the fire she found John standing there looking out into the darkness of the street. He swung around from the windows when she came in and took his hands out of his pockets.

"Here, I'll light the fire for you." He took the matches from her and struck one to the crumpled newspaper that lay under the logs.

"Going to marry Wallie," he said, turning his head to look up at her. "Gosh I suppose I should have been expecting it, but I wasn't. I thought you were just killing time with him."

"Don't you like him, John?"

He stood up, scowling down at the sudden blaze that sprang up in the grate. "Do you like him?" he asked adding:

"What I mean is this, Susan—Do you like him so much that it doesn't make a particle of difference to you whether I like him or not? Whether anybody likes him or not?"

Wants to Marry Him

Susan looked at him, wondering if that were the way she cared for Wallace.

"Because that's how you ought to like him if you're going to marry him," he went on, making a jerky outward movement with his hands. "The fact that the family thinks he's a wonder-boy isn't going to be much of a help to you if you marry him and find out that you aren't so very crazy about him. And I don't think you are, Susie. You just don't have the ear-marks of a grand passion about you, somehow . . . I ought not talk to you like this, but I want to be sure that you know what you're doing."

"I do know, John." Susan slipped one of her hands into one of his. "I've had a sort of idea for a long time that I might marry him if he asked me—and today when he did, I knew that I wanted to."

"Well that's just swell then. I had a wild idea that you might be taking Wallie just to get away from this place. But it'd be better to die on your fet right here, like Lutie and Aunt Edna, than to live with him unless you liked him a lot—There he is now."

"Forget that I talked to you like a red-headed step-mother," John said and made for the staircase. It struck Susan for the first time that he usually got out of Wallace's way when he came to call.

She opened the front door. On the porch, with the falling snow making a blowing curtain behind him, stood a man. Not Wallace, but a tall broad-shouldered young man in a gray overcoat. In the light that streamed out from the hall Susan could see that he was blue-eyed and extremely good-looking.

Mr. Sholes Arrives

"How do you do?" he said pleasantly. "Mr. Broderick said I might bring some of my things here tonight."

Susan saw then that he had a large suitcase in one of his hands, and that another one stood at his feet.

"Oh, yes, you're the—you're Mr. Sholes," she said, opening the door wider. "Come in. I'll run up and turn on the lights in your room."

"Thanks." He smiled at her, not with just his mouth, but with his whole face, and a twinkle came into his eyes.

She had always liked or disliked people because of their voices or the way they looked. If their voices were thin and sharp, or their eyes were set too close to the nose, she instinctively drew away from them, much as a child does. She decided, as she ran up the stairs ahead of Mr. Sholes, that she liked him. His voice and his eyes and his smile.

She saw, snapping on the lights in the bedroom, that nothing had been done to make it ready for a stranger. It smelled musty and dusty, the wall was still covered with family photographs in white and gilt frames, and Grandfather Broderick's brushes were still set out on the dresser.

"I suppose you'd like me to get some of these things out of your way," she murmured, picking up the Bible from the bedside table and the toilet things from the dresser.

In the mirror she could see him set one of his suitcases on the center table and open it. From it he began to take books and pile them on a chair beside him. Large thick volumes bound in tan leather, lettered in black and gold.

Their Eyes Meet

"Law books," she thought, recognizing them as the kind of volumes that lined the walls of her father's little office downtown.

"I was looking at your books. They're law books, aren't they?" she asked. "My father's a lawyer."

"I'm just trying to be one. Going to night school three times a week."

"Like it?" Susan knew that she had no further business in the room. She knew that Lutie and Aunt Edna would disapprove of her being there with Mr. Sholes if they knew about it. Still she lingered, the lovely long line of her body curving backward a little as she leaned against the dresser, smiling at him.

"I'll air this place tomorrow and take all the relatives down from the walls," she said, waving one hand at the family photographs. "This was my grandfather's room and it's been closed up most of the time for years. We've never rented it before. We've never rented any room before—to anyone."

He nodded, the smile gone now and the straight little laughter lines barely showing in his cheeks.

"I'm not at home very much," he said, "between law school and a job that I have down at the County Courthouse."

Susan saw that he was trying to tell her that he realized that it was going to be hard for them to have a stranger in the house for the first time, and that he was going to give as little trouble as possible.

He took two keys out of his trousers pocket and held them in his hand. "Mr. Broderick gave me these," he said. "One is the front door key and one is the key to the side door. I won't need them both."

He held the smaller one, the front door key, out to her.

"I'll use the side door," he went on. "I can go out and come in that way without disturbing anyone, Mr. Broderick said."

"He would," thought Susan. "I think you'd better keep both the keys," she said aloud.

He laid the front door key on the table and shook his head. "No. One door's enough for me," he insisted, "and perhaps you'll show me the way out now, so I'll know how to find it when I bring the rest of my traps tomorrow."

She noticed, as Mr. Sholes put out his hand to open the door, that the sleeve of his gray overcoat was frayed a little at the cuff and that his ungloved hand was chapped. He was just as shabby as she was in her faded old blue flannel.

"Do you hate to wear gloves?" she heard herself asking him, and it seemed to her that the question was asking itself.

He nodded his head. "I've lived out West for a long time where we didn't have to wear them unless we want to—and I just don't have the habit, I guess."

Feels Bond

"I've never had it," said Susan. She had an absurd feeling that it was a sort of bond between them that they both disliked to wear gloves.

"I'll bet he likes to walk around in the cold and the dark, too, just the way I do," she told herself when he had stepped out into the side yard where the arc light in front of the house threw cold purple-black shadows across the snow.

"Goodbye," his voice came to her from the darkness.

"Goodnight," Susan closed the door and stood leaning against it for a minute or two. She was filled with the oddest sense of excitement and thrill. A feeling that was entirely different from her feeling of satisfaction over her engagement to Wallace.

"Something's happened at last in this old rookery," she thought, with a fine feeling of exhilaration, as she started up the stairs to the rear hall . . . to this old rookery where nothing ever happened!

Her uncle was standing in the doorway at the end of the rear hall, waiting for her with the news that Wallace had arrived.

"No! so fast, young woman!" He stopped her as she murmured, "Thanks for telling me," and tried to squeeze past him. His breath was thick with the odor of the liquor that he had been drinking from the brown glass bottle on his desk—his "bitters," as he called it. Everyone in the family knew that he drank a great deal too much. But because he usually did it in the solitude of his little room, behind the closed door, none of them ever mentioned it to him or tried to stop him.

"That was Mr. Sholes you were talking to just now," he said.

"I was showing him where the side door is. He seems to have taken your hint about using it."

"Anna could have shown him where the side door is," he said with the air of a man who has a full staff of servants at his back and call. "There was no need for you to do it—and I don't like it, Susan! I don't like it a little bit! Before dinner when we talked over this matter of taking in a paying guest we all agreed that it wouldn't be necessary to become friendly with him—and now, crack out of the box, I find you haltwaggling with him in the back hall, while Wallace is cooling his heels at the front door."

TALENT PARADE -:- Soviet Envoy To Broadcast -:- ON AIR TONIGHT

Celebrities Stage Fete On Ship

One of radio's most expansive moods hits the industry tonight to result in a million dollar show aboard a mighty ship in the New York Harbor.

As was mentioned here several days ago, the fleet's arrival has done things to radio, and the production departments are making the most of it.

For an hour and a half tonight the Navy's mammonth air carrier, the Saratoga, will assume the guise of a huge auditorium, and from its deck, for 30 minutes, a portion of the starry fest will be wafted.

Among the satellites of the ether waves who will contribute to the entertainment will be Paul Whiteman and his troupe, Harry Richman and Eddie Peabody, both former gobs; the Pickens Sisters, Grace Hays, Mary Small, the Comedian Harmonists, Mario Cozzi, Ed Lowry and the Sisters of the Skillet, with John B. Kennedy as master of ceremonies.

The listeners' half hour has been scheduled at 11 p. m. on the NBC-blue network. While it will not be carried here, Pittsburgh dialers can pick it from the air on the WJZ band.

That very swell presentation of the Russian ballet, "The Red Poppy," which was started last Tuesday night, will be completed via KDKA in a one-hour broadcast at 10 tonight. The interpretation is Frank Black's.

In additon, Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador to the United States, will be heard in a brief address during the broadcast.

Still another ace up the radio sleeve is the Beauty Box Theater production, over NBC-WCAE at 10, of "Rio Rita," the Ziegfeld hit of never-fading popularity, with Gladys Swarthout, James Melton and John Barclay in the leading roles.

I. Lamont Hughes, president of the Carnegie Steel Company, will speak over KDKA at 7:15, his subject enveloping in one word the romance of Pittsburgh pioneering, "Steel." . . .

Ber Bernie brings one of his most famous proteges, Pittsburgh's Little Jackie Heller, to the microphone as guest tonight . . .

The WJAS serial dramatization of T. S. Stribling's story, "Conflict," moves into the 10 p. m. spot. . . .

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, presents "A Review of the Present Session" over WCAE at 11:30. . . .

Inhabitants of that expansive—and somewhat exclusive—realm of amateur radio operators may be interested in NBC's announcement of a new dramatic series dealing with true stories of heroic services rendered at times of stress by individuals of their fraternity. The plays start at 11 tonight via WEAF.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

President Bill Benswanger, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, broke the happy news to the youngsters on yesterday's broadcast. While he was talking on the vagaries of baseball and his hopes for the team, he announced that next Friday, June 15, would be the first boys' day at Forbes Field. The Brooklyn team will be in town on that day and they can expect to be blown off the field when that multitude of boys and girls start yelling for the Pirates.

Boys' Day at Forbes Field includes the girls, too. It means boys and girls—12 years and under—will be admitted free to watch the baseball game. They will not even have to pay the customary tax to Uncle Sam on free admission.

Ladies' Day, as usual, will be Thursday, June 14. That means free admision for the ladies as far as the ball park is concerned, but Uncle Sam wants 10 cents from each lady to help pay the nation's bills. So ladies, have your 10 cents for the government ready, when you go to the ball park Thursday.

In case the game is called off, bbecause of rain or wet grounds, the Globe Trotter will announce the postponement. If it rains after the broadcast is over, you had better telephone Forbes Field or our Sports Department direct.

George Taylor, of Atlanta, Ga., formerly of Pittsburgh, celebrated his 93rd birthday yesterday. Even though he moved South he attends all Globe Trotter meetings as religiously as his Pittsburgh comrades.

* * *

We haven't forgotten the veterans who are waiting for their bonus. The Department of Military Affairs is still working.

* * *

The question what the widow should do if her husband had already applied for his bonus in his own name was somewhat perplexing However, the answer is that she should make another application in her own name as an unremarried widow of a deceased Pennsylvania veteran.

'Phantoms' May Open New Radio Era

By AIRCASTER

At this time of year nature habitually takes a hand in the matter of broadcasting and provides her own music in the form of a dim popularity known as static. This season the old dame is showing unusual enthusiasm by adding a few novelties.

Scientists would give a pretty penny to know the answers to the radio riddles—a "ghost beam" and a "late echo"—which lately intruded themselves in audible guise.

If the correct solution of one of them, known technically as "delayed echoes," is found, the possibility of communication by radio with Mars and others planets presents itself.

The phantom radio beacon is an equally engaging problem. Five universities, including Wisconsin's, have sent their science staffs into the field to hunt down this ghost. It is probable that if you have a short wave set you may hear its wail any day. It is haunting the Department of Commerce, whose job it is to dispose of the phantom.

As is well known, radio beams —continuous signals like the drone of a bee—were invented to help aviators follow a straight course when the weather is bad and there is no visibility. This is the "on course" signal.

There are scientists who theorize that the phantom beam is a reflection of "on course" beacons, echoed back from the mountain sides, or from mineral deposits in the region where it is heard. Others blame it on sun spots.

SIGNALS IN HIDING

Less annoying is the other phenomenon now intriguing scientists. It is known as the "delayed echo." The savants want to know where radio signals sent out go, and remain, before they return. It is possible they make a trip to the moon by passing through the layer of ionization above the earth, hitherto believed almost impenetrable.

If this is so, the hope of sending signals between planets is not as forlorn as supposed.

It has been established that if you send out a radio wave of sufficient force to wend its way around the earth, you can hear it making the return trip exactly one-seventh of a second after it has been sent out. But now arises an intriguing question — waves lately sent out are coming home not a fraction of a second, but 24 to 30 seconds late.

NEW QUEST SEEN

Experiments with the echoes have been under way for some months at PCJJ at Hilversum, which operates at 31.4 meters. Receivers in the Dutch territory where PCJJ is located, and at Eindhoven and in London, have shown that these echoes vary in their delays.

If enough time is given to the study of these echoes and it is definitely established they are constant, Prof. C. Stormer, famous European authority on aurora phenomena, asserts an important discovery has been made that may lead men into a new quest of the universe.

There is also a radio listener angle to all these things, first, because the ghost beam may jump to any wave length and join the din of static in the loudspeaker, and second, because the delayed echoes sooner or later are bound to cause serious distortion of radio waves when they occur at a time interval of a fraction of a second after the original reception.

The condition often has been found troublesome in locations where the ground phase of the wave reached a receiver before the sky part of it was captured.

Local Highlights On WJAS

Al Kiel appears as guest vocalist in a special half-hour program with Baron Elliott's band on WJAS tonight at 8:30.

Other good bets — Jesse Hawkins' band at 11, Paul Gannon at 6:45, and Naomi Gunst at 5:45.

Eddie Peyton plays a waltz medley of new tunes during his 11:30 Frivolities.

"PUKKA"

A good old word, ladies and gentlemen, meaning, if you know your Indian, "all wool and a yard wide," or words to that effect. When a store's "Pukka", it's the kind of a store you can depend upon—a store without tricks or foolishness—a store that sells good goods too successfully to need the cheap bait of exaggerated claims that deceive only the unthinking.

RASPBERRY TARTS

One and one-half cups flour.
Three-quarter teaspoon salt.
Three-quarter cup shortening.
Five tablespoons ice water.

Sift flour and salt. Cut in one-quarter cup shortening very coarsely. Add only enough water to hold ingredients together. Roll out on lightly floured board to one-quarter inch thickness. Spread evenly with shortening. Fold two edges till they meet in center—bring two opposite edges to meet in center also. Roll out again. Repeat this process until shortening is used up (about three times in all). Chill pastry ice-cold. Then roll out one-eighth inch thick and cut into circles three inches across. Bake 10 minutes in hot oven (450° degrees Fahrenheit). When cool put two rounds together with fresh raspberries (or diced fruit) and custard filling.

Custard.

Heat one and one-half cups milk in double boiler. Mix two-third cup sugar, two tablespoons flour, one tablespoon cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon salt. Add to milk, stirring constantly. Stir and cook until custard thickens. Stir in two beaten egg yolks and cook one minute longer. Remove from heat. Add one teaspoon vanilla. Cool.

MRS. J. E. HART,
6455 Aurelia street.

VANILLA STRAWBERRY ROLL

One pint fresh strawberries.
One-quarter cup granulated sugar.
Two teaspoons gelatin.
Two tablespoons cold water.
One cup whipping cream.
Four tablespoons confectioners' sugar.
Forty vanilla wafers. (two-inch wafers).

Wash and hull berries. Save some of the best for decorating. Mash the rest of the berries and add the granulated sugar, using more if berries are very sour. Soak the gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Blend into the berries and chill until it begins to set. Fold in cream whipped until stiff and sweetened with the confectioners' sugar. Chill until it seems quite firm. Place a spoonful of strawberry mixture on a vanilla wafer and place another wafer on top. Repeat until all the cookies are used. Lay roll lengthwise on a dish or tray and completely cover with remaining strawberry cream mixture. Place in refrigerator to become set, only 3 or 4 hours. Decorate with halves of berries and if desired, pipings and rosettes of whipped cream. Eight to 10 servings. Note—For individual servings, pile three or four cookies together with the filling. Cover and decorate and serve on individual dessert plates.

Vanilla Wafers.

One cup shortening.
Two cups sugar.
Three eggs.
One teaspoon vanilla.
Three cups flour.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-half cup milk.

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Blend in well beaten eggs and vanilla. Sift flour once before measuring. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add alternately with the milk. Mix until smooth and chill in the refrigerator one hour or longer. Drop by small teaspoon on slightly greased brown paper placed on a cookie sheet and bake on center rack in oven. Bake 10 minutes in a hot oven 400 degrees F. This amount makes six dozen cookies.

Scallops Have the Charm of Refinement

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern

There are some sort of clothes and certain details which people just naturally label "nice." Scallops used like these are one of them—they have an innate refinement that appeals on sight—and in a plain fabric they are even prettier than when used in a patterned stuff. But the scallops are only a detail—though an important one—in a frock that is excellent in line and very flattering to the more mature figure. Take a cotton that costs just a few cents a yard and make it up from this pattern and you will have a most delightful frock.

Pattern 1910 is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3⅝ yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

The smartest warm weather fashions, the newest fabrics, and the summer season's outstanding accessories are illustrated and described in the NEW PATTERN BOOK FOR SUMMER. ORDER YOUR COPY OF THIS HELPFUL NEW SUMMER BOOK. PRICE OF BOOK 15 CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER, 25 CENTS.

NEW PRICES CHANGE THE PICTURE

IF YOU READ the papers last week you probably saw that Plymouth had substantially reduced its prices.

Unless you are in the automobile business you probably don't realize just what this means.

It means the prices of "all three" are now so close you can well afford to dismiss that factor from your mind. What you should think about today is WHAT YOU GET FOR YOUR MONEY.

For instance, take this question of SAFETY. Surely nothing is more important than the protection of your family.

When you put your foot on the brakes you want your car to stop RIGHT IN ITS TRACKS.

When emergencies happen you don't want to depend on ordinary brakes that often make your car skid and swerve dangerously.

With Hydraulic Brakes you can jam the pedal down to the floor and STOP DEAD. The marks on the pavement will track straight ahead.

Even if Plymouth COST MORE it would be worth it . . . just for this one feature alone. But add to this the security of a Safety-Steel Body . . . the comfort of Floating Power engine mountings . . . the smoother ride of Individual Front Wheel Springing . . . and remember you get these features in Plymouth without spending one extra red cent.

Don't buy your next car through habit. Don't be blind to the changes that have taken place in the low price field. Go look at a Plymouth today . . . at any Dodge, DeSoto or Chrysler dealer. Buy no car until you do.

TAX MILLIONS OWED COUNTY STUDY SHOWS

Allegheny County had $17,812,-713 taxes for 1932-33 still uncollected on January 1, 1934, according to the preliminary report of the Civil Works Administration real estate census for Pennsylvania.

The figures for Allegheny County which are slightly higher than the average for the state show that 23.3 per cent of the taxes are delinquent. The levy for the county for the fiscal year closing June 30, 1933, was $74,974,034. The uncollected amount for the entire state was $62,945,814, an average of 22.5 per cent.

The survey of tax delinquency which was undertaken as a CWA project comprises all the states and all cities of over 25,000 population.

Director William L. Austin, of the real estate division of the Bureau of Census, said:

"Pennsylvania counties do not show the wide variation in delinquencies found in many states. The counties which contain the largest cities show substantially the same rates."

Philadelphia County with a levy of $99,135,114 had $23,273,340 uncollected, or an average identical with that of Allegheny County.

The census work in Allegheny County was done under the direction of Harry Workmaster, a member of the County Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes.

Monkeys Living Life of Riley, Science Finds

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 12 (AP).—Life is of the communal type among the howling monkeys, Dr. C. R. Carpenter, research assistant in phychobiology at Yale University, reports, and not the ruthless struggle that it is often supposed to be in the animal world.

First hand evidence of this species of primates native to the Canal Zone is presented by Dr. Carpetner in a monograph published this week.

Among the howlers, Dr. Carpenter says, no individual dominates the group, nor do they engage in physical combat among themselves for food or territory. The old and chippled are not left behind and concerted defensive action is taken against common dangers, Dr. Carpenter found.

Howlers have in effect a language, rD. Carpenter says. There are nine different kinds of vocalisation distinctive of the species and from which it derives its name. The noise can be heard on occasion at a distance of three miles.

Definite bonds exist not alone between mothers and their infants, but between all members of the clan.

'EDUCATE OUR MAYOR,' PLEA OF TECH GRADUATES

POLITICS

Coleman Has Votes To Win Saturday

By MARK SHIELDS

Republican County Chairman William H. Coleman today announced without equivocation that he is a candidate to succeed himself at the county committee meeting to be held Saturday afternoon at North Side Carnegie Hall. To close the door on speculation, Mr. Coleman added with emphasis that he never started anything he didn't go through with, thereby noting stories that he might pull out.

Mr. Shields

It is known that Attorney General William A. Schnader and Senator David A. Reed would like to have a new head for the Republican County Committee, just as they secured new leadership for the state committee in Philadelphia last Saturday. In that accomplishment they were supported forcefully by former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, who with Gen. W. W. Atterbury has taken charge of the party in the state.

Here in Allegheny County, however, it is doubtful if the Grundy influence would be turned against Coleman. In addition to many other persons, the McKeesport attorney is favored by Senator James J. Coyne, and Coyne has been definitely aligned with Grundy in past political contests.

Friends of Coleman today insisted he had the votes to win, even should there be a fight. Some of those who would like to see him step aside admitted this was true.

Casey Tries to Stir Boom for A. C. Leslie

John P. Casey, civic worker-contractor-political dabbler, would like to see Artemus C. Leslie, son of the late Senator M. G. Leslie, become county chairman. Mr. Casey was one of those instrumental in the maneuvers which led up to the retirement of Gen. Edward Martin as state chairman last week, and was quite prominent in the various political knots which gathered in Philadelphia.

Former Mayor John S. Herron has been suggested for the chairmanship, but is understood not to care for the prospect of managing the party fight this fall.

There has been considerable speculation as to the man who will be chosen to act as an executive assistant to M. Harvey Taylor, the new state chairman. A. Boyd Hamilton, secretary of the State Senate, served in this capacity with Gen. Martin, but he will not remain with Taylor.

The fight to oust Hamilton was as hot as that to retire Martin, Mr. Grundy having a bitter dislike for his old associate. Formerly close friends, they severed relations during the last year or so of the Fisher administration, when the former Governor and Grundy—also close for years—split.

Hamilton, secretary to Fisher, sided with his then chief and burned the bridges which attached him to the Grundy faction.

Former May Be New Aide to Chairman

The man who succeeded Hamilton as secretary to the Governor was Frank Gorman, a Grundy aide, whom Fisher came to dislike much as he did Grundy. Now it is reported that he will again succeed Hamilton, this time as assistant to the chairman. If this does occur it would be interesting to secure for printing some unvarnished quotations from former Gov. Fisher, whose staunch United Presbyterianism is not armor against every affront.

Gorman at one time was a member of the Securities Commission and is well known to politicians through his service in various positions.

Not far from the new state setup will be Representative John Flynn, of Elk County, usually labeled the veteran Democrat of the House, but always a member of Mr. Grundy's entourage. Last week in Philadelphia he participated in conferences which comprised Martin, Auditor General Frank Baldwin and Senator Harry B. Scott.

However, he was legitimately there, for in the primary he was defeated for the Democratic nomination, but won as a Republican. In the past he frequently has gained both nominations, a policy against which the Republicans last week declared warfare.

Mrs. Cochrane Quits Fourth Ward Office

Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane has resigned as vice chairman of the Fourth Ward regular Republican organization, a position to which she was elected last week. Her resignation was sent to Chairman Howard Neely, thanking the ward organization for the election, but regretting that she could not serve.

In the recent primary Mrs. Cochrane was an ardent worker for Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, who sought the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Man, 50, Found Dead In Banksville Shanty

Peter Getz, 50, was found dead in his shanty in Banksville road last night, according to a morgue report. John Stoner, who lived with him, said Getz went to sleep shortly after eating dinner. An autopsy revealed death due to natural causes.

'ANGEL' OF MINE DISASTERS MOURNED

'Capt. Nell' Comforted Widows of Valley Explosions

The body of Adjt. Nell Bryant, of the Salvation Army, was being borne for interment to Cincinnati, the city of her birth, today, but behind lingered memories of a ministering angel of mercy.

Known throughout the Allegheny Valley district as "Captain Nell," the sunny-faced, first aid worker at many a mine disaster, died Saturday in the Salvation Army home at New Kensington. She had been stationed at that post for seven years.

Wherever weeping wives and children stood outside blast-torn coal pits, there could be seen "Captain Nell," with her group of assistants, giving out coffee and sandwiches, spreading courage and comfort and—to those who had lost loved ones—consolation.

Through sleet, rain and cold she stood by her post as long as there was need for her labors. She was particularly in the front line of relief workers at the Barking mine disaster several years ago.

Prior to coming here, "Capt. Nell" had been in the Salvation Army service in Cincinnati, Columbus and Johnstown.

Funeral services were held at the New Kensington home yesterday in charge of Col. C. B. Campbell, divisional commander of the Pittsburgh area.

She leaves her husband, Adjt. V. C. Bryant; a son, Robert, and several grandchildren. She was aged 44.

JOBLESS RAP RELIEF BOARD METHODS

West End Citizens Charge Clothing Pleas Discarded

Supervisors of direct relief and relief work in the county today faced new protests from the unemployed and destitute of the Pittsburgh district.

Charges of negligence were hurled at the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board by a group of West End citizens who assembled in the Fourth avenue headquarters of the association late yesterday, declaring they had found applications for clothing disregarded and thrown into a waste basket.

Mrs. Alice Gilmore, head of the unit, said the requests were disposed of after they had been entered in the records of case workers. They will be fulfilled, she said, in the regular routine of the office.

RWD rules barring non-relief cases from jobs were condemned by a committee from the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians. Representing the organization, J. A. Yeakal asked for a renewal of white collar and technical projects with no discrimination shown against persons not on the welfare rolls.

TROLLEY NOTE SENT MAYOR

A resolution sponsored by William A. Magee asking the Traction Conference Board for a report on the traction problem in Pittsburgh has been passed by Council and now goes to the Mayor for his signature.

The vote in Council was unanimous yesterday, but Councilman Walter R. Demmler read a statement in which he declared the Traction Board should have submitted the data without being asked.

Magee had proposed a six-point program on which the Traction Board was to be requested to submit information to Council. Experiments with fares, the use of bus service, the rate paid by the Pittsburgh Railways Company for power and the relation of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company to the railways company were included.

Secretary Wallace To Talk at Wellesley

The Pittsburgh Committee of the Summer Institute for Social Progress at Wellesley College today announced that Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace will speak on economic policies of the administration at a conference at that school July 7 to 21.

Mrs. Stuart L. Henderson is chairman of the committee, which includes Marcus Aaron, Dr. Thomas S. Baker, Frank A. Bond, Mrs. W. S. Dalzell, Judge James H. Gray, Mrs. W. S. Hetzel, Miss Louise Knox, Dr. Marion McKay, Mrs. Thomas W. Pomeroy, Miss Mary Louise Succop and E. M. Weyer.

THE STREET ROLLER THAT RAN AWAY IN WEST LIBERTY AVENUE, BROKE THREE POLES

'CAN'T TAKE IT,' '34 MEN SAY OF M'NAIR

Baloney Term Irks Former Students; They're 'Amazed'

His Honor Mayor McNair incited another barrage of news today. The developments:

1—Carnegie Tech graduates, who described him as Jimmy Walker's understudy, blasted the mayor for criticizing their commencement speaker.

2—The Mayor announced he intends to eliminate Morals Court.

3—His Honor appeared facetiously undisturbed over the slander suit threatened by E. N. Jones, state director of the National Recovery Administration.

4—An interesting time for one and all seemed in store when the Mayor announced that he would speak tonight at a Communist meeting in Fifth Avenue High School.

Mayor McNair's negative nods while a speaker was addressing Carnegie Tech's commencement exercises brought charges from Tech graduates today that the Mayor "can't take it."

They added that in their opinion the Mayor is in need of "further education" along economic lines.

Sitting on the speakers' platform in Syria Mosque yesterday while Waldemar Kaempffert, science editor of the New York Times, praised economic planning, McNair indicated his disagreement by vigorously shaking his head.

'BALONEY'—M'NAIR

Later the Mayor was quoted as terming the address

"Just a bunch of baloney."

The Mayor's attitude brought this comment from the Tech men:

"When Mayor McNair criticized the Tech commencement address he proved definitely and conclusively that he can't take it.

"If Waldemar Kaempffert's address were the baloney that McNair contends it was we are sure that the Mayor would not have shown his disapproval.

"Imagine the amazement of 466 graduates when the solemnity of the occasion was disrupted by Jimmy Walker's understudy stepping to the front in a flashy suit, green shirt and white socks.

REAL EXPERT HELD NEED

"Perhaps McNair is right when he says that he has too many experts already but it was evident at the Tech graduation that one more expert of the right type should be able to do the Mayor a lot of good.

"It is hoped that Mr. Kaempffert will consent to a debate with the Mayor and if he does members of the class of 1934 expect to witness the further education of Mr. McNair."

Graduates who signed the statement included John Hackney, I. Lee Wissmiller, W. Sefton Walker, Arthur P. Deemer and Ralph D. Moyer.

McNair Announces Plan To Drop Morals Court

Mayor McNair declared today that he intends to do away with Morals Court. He said:

"I am going to gradually eliminate Morals Court. There is nothing down there that could not be handled in the Police Courts.

"The majority of the cases are drunks."

Meanwhile, John C. Davis, former file clerk in the Mayor's office, took over the work of chief clerk in Morals Court, succeeding Charles W. Houston, who had been employed there 12 years. After making the change, the Mayor said:

"Davis is familiar with my principles."

McNair Facetious, Waits Jones Suit

Mayor McNair grew facetious today over prospect of being sued for slander by E. N. Jones, state director of the National Recovery Administration. He said:

"They have not filed the papers on me."

FUNDS SOUGHT FOR CHILDREN

Pointing out that 25,000 preschool children on relief in Pittsburgh are suffering from malnutrition, Mrs. Charles C. Cooper, director of the Kingsley Association, today urged co-operation in the organization's special appeal for funds.

All contributions to the drive, launched yesterday, will be used for summer outings for underprivileged children and their mothers at the Lillian Home, the organization's nutrition camp at Valencia. Mrs. Cooper said:

"It is for those thousands who need the out-of-the-ordinary care to prevent tuberculosis, weakened hearts, bone defects, stunted growth and other irreparable damage that the home is conducted.

"Care-free days of play and rest; sunlight and country air; careful diet explained to the mothers so that it may be followed at home — experience proves that, in hundreds of cases, these will turn the balance upward toward health."

Of the 25,000 undernourished children in Pittsburgh, 8,000 are in dangerous condition, she declared.

Sharpsburg to Ask Buses on Bridge

Formal demand for bus service on the Sixty-second Street Bridge will be made tonight to the Pittsburgh Railways Company by Sharpsburg Council, Secretary Henry Hohman said today. Bus and street car service on the structure was discontinued yesterday after the bridge had been declared unsafe for buses and street cars by county engineers.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 12.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

When the National Recovery Act (NRA) was drawn up there was one clause in there in regard to "collective bargaining," and it was known at the time that the thing could mean just about anything that anybody wanted it to. Now they never will get through with all these strikes till they send that clause to a supreme court that has a Webster dictionary, and let them hold a final clinic, and announce just what the thing means in case it does mean anything. It's always better to brand a calf plain the first time, you just can't brand him so he will belong to both outfits.

Yours,

WILL.

G.O.P. CIVIL WAR IN OVERBROOK

More grief today had been piled upon the already burdend shoulders of Republican City Chairman William J. Soost.

He's to "arbitrat" at another meeting of Republicans of the Thirty-second Ward to select a chairman after a meeting last night had ended in a near-riot and with supporters of George W. Williams and J. J. McGrath both claiming victory.

The noisy crowd filling Engine House No. 59, in Overbrook, was dispersed by police. Williams and McGrath were both "elected" at rump sessions after the general session had failed.

Both sides blame the other for the disturbance. One faction said a supporter of one of the rival candidates had attempted to vote for five absent members of the committee.

Soost is to determine the chairman in four other ward battles in which two chairmen were recently elected.

Driver Held Up, Robbed by Pair

Two Negroes held up N. W. Burton, of Chicago, as he drove his car in Bigelow boulevard at Forbes street last night and robbed him of $22, police reported. Burton said they stepped on the running board when he was stopped by a red light. Several blocks away they fled with their loot.

Beamish to Inspect Rebuilt Vote Devices

Allegheny County's voting machines, now being reconditioned by Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, will be inspected next week by Secretary of the Commonwealth Richard J. Beamish, he said yesterday. A model built by Westinghouse engineers has been approved. Most of the machines are expected to be completed for use in the November election.

Surgeons' New Plan Is Only 5,000 Years Old

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

American congress of surgeons in Chicago sprung a new curse that was five thousand years old.

But the radio comics won't steal it—for it's no gag.

The surgeons suggest voluntary prepayment health insurance.

What that means? It's the Chinese system of paying a doctor when you are feeling good and not giving him a dime when you are sick.

He does his share by next coming around.

There is a buzzer in the ointment, however.

The Chinese system of paying the doctor in advance will conflict with the American habit of not paying him at all.

Man Found Dead On Railroad Tracks

Walter Odziana, 38, of Clifford street, was found dead on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks at that street early today. His body was found by Louis Martin, who lives nearby.

STEAM ROLLER IN WILD DASH

A heavy roller being used in street repair work ran away in West Liberty avenue this afternoon and in its wild dash broke off two telephone poles, snapped a third and ended up by crashing into a parked automobile.

The driver, William Kennedy, 21, an employe of the Brinker Supply Company, 6545 Hamilton avenue, stuck to his post in a futile effort to bring the roller under control. He escaped uninjured.

Like a huge war tank crushing all before it, the lumbering machine, out of Kennedy's control, plowed forward, breaking poles before it as if they were match stems.

The roller struck the automobile parked before a service station at 2046 West Liberty avenue after it had lost most of its momentum. The auto, unoccupied at the time, was slightly damaged.

SLAG PILE SUIT AFFECTS 400

Approximately 400 men will be thrown out of work if the McKeesport Coal and Coke Company is compelled to stop dumping on the company's slag pile, now on fire at the company's mine in Versailles Borough, it was testified yesterday in a suit to compel the company to do away with the nuisance.

The Borough of Versailles, City of McKeesport and a number of individuals filed injunction proceedings, and Judge Samuel H. Gardner took testimony all day yesterday. At the conclusion of the hearing he requested that briefs be submitted within two weeks.

Witnesses against the company said the dump emitted sulphurous gases and smoke and was a detriment to their property. It was testified by witnesses for the company that slag from Freeport-vein mines always catches fire.

It was also declared that if the company is forced to sink a new shaft for a distance of 350 feet at a cost of $150 a foot it will mean an expense of $50,000.

Students Agreeing That Mayor Needs an 'Expert'

JOHN HACKNEY I. LEE WISSMILLER W. SEFTON WALKER ARTHUR P. DEEMER RALPH D. MOYER

Five of the Carnegie Tech students who objected to Mayor McNair's conduct on the speakers' platform during Carnegie's commencement exercises, today issued a statement pointing out that an expert might personally do the Mayor a lot of good.

Toll Protest Opposed By Mt. Lebanon Board

Fearful that "any quick and aggressive action" might jeopardize Allegheny County's chances of obtaining $30,000,000 for a county-wide improvement program, the Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioners today had declined to go on record opposing the county's plan for charging a toll on Liberty Bridge.

The commissioners indicated they were opposed to the toll, but are inclined to favor a toll on the Port Duquesne Bridge and tunnel proposed to replace the Wabash span.

Mayor McNair today said he would help the fight against tolls on the Liberty Bridge, or organizing a group to be known as the "East Liberty Civic Association."

Action by the Mt. Lebanon Kiwanis Club in telegraphing a protest to Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, was condemned by L. C. Clark, chairman of the commissioners, and Commissioner Boland L. Thompson. Clark said:

"We want to state at this time that we don't want the toll, but since the government will absolutely demand there be some self-liquidating plan, we shouldn't take any quick or aggressive action."

An invitation to the commissioners to attend a protest mass meeting tomorrow night was extended by D. W. Baker, of the Mt. Lebanon Civic League.

National Headquarters Today Lowers Membership Requirement for Flight Squadron to Eight Members!

By J. JAMES MOORE

Greetings, Junior Birdmen! I was all prepared to give you the details today of the new Junior Birdmen Model Plane Institute, a service which is being established to protect you model builders when purchasing your supplies and kits, when I received a message from National Headquarters which I think is of even greater importance to you. And so I postpone until tomorrow the news of our Institute plans in order to inform you who wish to organize a flight squadron with less than 20 members that it can now be done!

I have a great many letters on my desk from boys and girls stating that they would like to organize a flight squadron unit in their neighborhood but that they just couldn't seem to coral 20 members. That is quite a number. And other Wing Commanders in Junior Birdmen wing cities too have had the same difficulty.

So, today, I am permitted to announce that hereafter you members can organize a unit in your neighborhood or town, school or church, with eight (8) members instead of the previous requirement of twenty (20). I had previously announced that it would be ten (10) but the new plan of eight was thought to be better.

Organize Your Unit Of Eight Members

Of course we already have four local Junior Birdmen flight Squadrons that were organized under the old ruling, with 20 charter members to begin with. However, the new lesser requirement should encourage more of you boys and girls to band yourselves together and build a flight squadron.

Send for your Official Charter Officers' Bars and the Book of Rules covering the activities and meetings of flight squadrons at once!

All you have to do now, to form a unit of your own, is to send me the names of eight Junior Birdmen members together with their membership numbers, enclosing 25 cents for registration fee. If you can't find eight members in your neighborhood or school, get eight boys or girls to join and then form your own flight squadron.

You will have lots of fun conducting your own weekly meetings, model contests and other unit activities as outlined in the Flight Squadron Booklet which will be sent to you with your beautiful charter and the official officers' for your commander and captain.

Don't delay. Organize your unit before the summer vacation starts in. It will give you plenty of activity during the warm summer months, holding your meeting outdoors and enjoying your many Flight Squadron activities, in addition to those given you by the Wing and National Headquarters.

Every member, when receiving his or her membership material, will find a leaflet enclosed explaining more fully just how to organize a Junior Birdmen Flight Squadron, with or without a sponsor to guide you in your work. Follow these details carefully, when applying for a charter. But remember the new change in rules—YOU NEED BUT EIGHT MEMBERS TO FORM A UNIT OF YOUR OWN!

Field Day On Saturday

Our first annual Field Day postponed due to rain and a low ceiling will be held Saturday at the City-County Airport!

Most of the fliers whom we promised you last week will be at the municipal field Saturday afternoon to give you a real air show. If you bought a special street car ticket for the meet last week it will be good on Saturday. Hundreds of boys and girls have already bought theirs. How about you?

In another part of the paper—in a story-telling about the thrilling show—you find a list of stations where you can buy the special rate 25-cent passes that will take you to the airport by street car and bus.

I'll have more news for you about the pageant during the week. Read the story about the Model Plane Institute in tomorrow's paper.

Happy Landings!

Oakland Church Holding Country Fair

GIRL TO ENTER AIR RACE

Miss Helen MacCloskey, Pittsburgh's flying society girl, today entered the third annual Annette Gipson all-women air race, to be held at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, Sunday, June 24.

Miss MacCloskey and Miss Helen Richey, McKeesport's endurance flier, were both invited to enter the race. Miss Richey took part in the race last year, but said she will probably remain out this year, because she does not have a suitable ship for speed flying. She said:

"I'm going to see the race, however. And if I don't enter I'm going to cheer for Helen."

The pilots will race three times around a 10-mile closed course.

Both Miss MacCloskey and Miss Richey will fly at the Junior Birdmen Field Day, Saturday, at the City-County Airport.

JEWISH APPEAL BRINGS $85,000

Contributions to the Pittsburgh campaign of the United Jewish Appeal for German Relief today stood at $85,000, against a goal of $100,000.

Meeting at the Y. M. and W. H. A., Bellefield avenue, last night, 250 workers were addressed by A. L. Wolk, assistant city solicitor, and Leon Falk, Jr., associate campaign chairman. Leo Lehman, general chairman, presided.

Funds raised throughout the country will be used for relief and rehabilitation of Jews in Germany, and to aid refugees in Palestine and other countries.

BIRDMEN SHIPS TO PLAY GAME IN AIR

lower does exactly as the leader, looping or diving at a given point. Every youngster has played it. It is hard to imagine a prettier stunt in the air."

A host of daring, capable fliers is assured already for the air pageant, which unfortunately was postponed from last Saturday. They are eager to appear if it will give young America a better idea of what modern aviation has become.

The meet is free to youngsters of all ages, and to their parents. Special street car and bus fares to the field will be available for boys and girls of 16 or under. Tickets bought last week will be honored this Saturday.

PILOTS TO ATTEND

Among pilots to attend the air pageant will be Ralph Lockwood, Bob Trader, William Murray, W. J. Griffith, Fred Green, Jimmy Franklin, Irving Newman, Helen Richey, Helen McCloskey and Boy Pyper.

August C. Haller, glider champion, will also be at the field.

Arnold Smith and Joseph Isuro, expert builders of model planes, will show the youngsters how planes are built to specifications which correspond with actual flying planes.

A group of planes, flying high in the sky, will dive at colored balloons as one of the spectacular stunts of the day.

SPECIAL FARES ARRANGED

Other planes will show how "spot" landings are made—landing with the motor cut out, the plane gliding down toward the field and finally "pancaking" to a stop.

Permission to do the latter stunts has been obtained from the Department of Commerce by Hal T. Bazley, manager of the City-County airport.

Lieut. Corley McDarment, commandant of Rodgers Field, will fly to the airport and will act as master of ceremonies.

A special 25-cent round trip street car and bus pass to the field for any boy or girl under 16 years of age has been arranged by the Sun-Telegraph through the Pittsburgh Railways Company. The pass will be on sale at the following stations:

The Sun-Telegraph main office, Telegraph square; the Sun-Telegraph branch office, Fifth avenue and Market street; Homewood News Company, 540 North Homewood avenue, Homewood; L. Broudy Confectionery, 5466 Penn avenue; Brown's Confectionery, 115 Shady avenue; Mr. Conegley, book store, 326 East Eighth avenue, Homestead; Young News, 5804 Forbes street; Roderose Brothers, 316 Seventh street, Braddock; Muhr's Confectionery, 257 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks; West End Dairy Store, 432 Main street, West End; Carrick News Company, 2600 Brownsville road, Carrick; P. & A. News, 220 Federal street, North Side; North Bend News, 801 Lincoln avenue, Bellevue; C. Kaiser, Freeport street, Etna; Tega's Confectionery, 622 East Ohio street, North Side.

Or you can get your field day pass at the following street railway car houses:

Keating, Millvale, Manchester, South Hills, Ingram, Rankin, Glenwood, McKeesport, Craft avenue, Homewood, Highland, Herron Hill, Plummer street, and the main office, 435 Sixth avenue.

HOW TO GET THERE

To reach the airport from the downtown, take a No. 56 McKeesport car. It will carry you out Second avenue, through Hays and Lincoln Place. At Grandview stop—where the Lebanon Church road bridge crosses the street car tracks—a bus will take you the remaining mile to the airport.

Junior Birdmen, over 16 years of age, and adults will have to pay the regular street car rate to Grandview stop. The bus fare to the airport will be five (5) cents each way. We hope that you members take advantage of the special street car and bus rates.

The special 25-cent pass will be good on all street car lines and in all fare zones except on interurban, special or picnic cars. It will be good only on Saturday.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Looks like Junior's gang might take a cross-country auto tour, fellows!

How would you like to do that? The old soldier is telling them some of his "tall" stories, we notice, about the times when he was a boy and made "the western trails."

Course we all know that grandpaw couldn't have made all the roads out west and that he likes to tell big stories like that. It was even before grandpaw was born that the pioneers found their way across the country to Oregon, Washington, California, and the big Pacific Ocean, 3,000 miles away off in the West.

Going across that long distance in the old days, before the settlers inhabited the West, was quite a problem. There were wild Indians roaming over the plains then, and often they swooped down on the wagon trains with tomahawks and fire arrows. By that time, too, some of the Indians had guns, and that made them more dangerous than they were when America was discovered and they had only arrows to shoot.

Nowadays, the whole West is pretty much settled, and the Indians are living quietly just like everybody else. Many of them farm or herd sheep and cattle.

And getting clear across the country, whether you go by automobile, train or airplane is easy and quick. There are good roads almost all the way, and Junior and his gang ought to have a lot of fun.

For there are still many things to see and lots of adventures on the road, even though the Indians don't lurk in the mountains. For instance, there is the great Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, where it is deepest in Arizona. And there are the wonderful national parks, Yellowstone, where they have the geysers, and Glacier, where they have the ice cold lakes and glaciers.

And finally, after you get over the mountains, there is beautiful California.

But don't forget that we think that you don't have to leave Pennsylvania to see a beautiful state, too. What do you think?

he would enter suit tomorrow, the Mayor said.

"I've been waiting around for them. If I go out I will leave word where I'm going so they can find me. I should have a bond in my pocket. I thought I had one with me but I got the wrong paper."

He pulled out an official-looking document with the comment:

"That's an old fire insurance policy. Will that keep me out of jail?"

Jones took exceptions to remarks attributed to the Mayor in a recent speech in which he is reported to have said:

"Why, even Magee had to fire Jones."

Jones was police head for a time under former Mayor W. A. Magee.

'His Honor' to Talk Red Off Platform

Mayor McNair hopes to overcome Communism by sheer talking ability, he indicated today.

The Mayor announced he will attend a meeting of Communists in Fifth Avenue High School auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight when Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party in America, will speak.

McNair said:

"I intend to go out and talk that speaker off the platform."

Before going to the Communist meeting, the Mayor will attend a session of the board of trustees of the University of Pittsburgh in the Duquesne Club.

"A number of friends have asked me how I keep my skin so soft," said a young dietician. "I've told them that all my complexion care can be summed up in one word—Camay."

Try Camay—and convince yourself! You'll be sorry if you don't—for you'll be cheating your skin of the gentle care of as fine a beauty soap as can be made.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

So far the youngest horseman in the Children's Horse Show, to be held by the Hart's Run Junior Hunt Saturday afternoon on the John W. Lawrences' estate, near Sharpsburg, will be 6-year-old H. Hilliard Robinson, son of the T. A. Robinsons, who carried off a blue ribbon in a Shetland pony class at the Allegheny Country Club horse show.

Seven-year-old Helen Redmond, of Mars, Pa., will be another youthful exhibitor at the children's show. And in spite of her youth, she's carried off prizes at the Allegheny Country Club show, too.

Blonde 8-year-old Susie Hays, 7-year-old Elizabeth Eierman and 9-year-old George R. Patterson, whose mother, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, is noted all over the country for her horsemanship and her horses, will also be exhibitors at the children's show.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Girl Wants to Get Real Social Personality

MAY wants a SOCIAL PERSONALITY . . .

She wants to improve her CONTACTS . . . She wants this personality to be so vigorous that it will sweep them desired people right off their feet . . .

Already she admits she has a personality that puts her over in quite a big way with a small circle of friends. But that is not enough . . . She longs to go out into a bigger field and there to do her social climbing in such a fashion that people will STOP, LOOK and LISTEN . . .

And I say, go to it, May . . .

Ambition is always nine parts good . . . but we've got to watch it meticulously that other one part.

Miss Brunot

We all think of Cromwell and his pathetic cry: "Had I served my God with half the zeal I served my king . . . I would not have been left in my old age" . . . and so on . . .

WOULD BE DIFFERENT

All about us, if we take time to watch, there are both men and women who are filled with an insatiable desire to be SOMETHING MORE THAN THEY ARE . . .

Some go about it in a straightforward way, merely arranging events so that they will be given a lion's share of the best. Others cringe and whine and use the makeshift of humble pie as the appetizer for the man higher up . . . Again there are those whose goodwill and shiny mannerisms bring them nearly everything that the outside world counts worthwhile . . .

Now, May, if your desire is a wholesome one . . . If you only want to play the cards well for yourself, and not to take any tricks that aren't really yours . . . If you never stoop to reneging . . . or marking the cards, or having an ace up your wide sleeve, it is all right . . . you have a right to be popular, to climb up step by step, until you sit with the elect . . .

There also is the good that a big personality can do . . . If a sister is talented in making friends, in causing people to stop and stare at her . . . and if she uses this talent as a betterment for not only herself, but also others, all well and good. But the trouble lies in allowing selfish motives to be behind one's acts . . .

WEIGHS CHARACTERISTICS

You say, May, that you always weigh everyone's characteristics before you allow yourself to be their friends . . .

Don't you think that a little cold? . . . Sort of putting everyone in the refrigerator and letting them arrive at the freezing point before reaching your verdict . . .

I can't for the life of me see how any woman can do this with everyone . . . I have met people that I just couldn't help but like, and if they had faults, which all of us have, I just accepted them, faults and all . . . We aren't really living until we can forgive someone for something or other . . . We aren't truly human beings until we have passed through the miserable days of disillusionment, when someone hasn't marvelled the chalkline for us . . .

And yet we still come up smiling, and willing to say, "I am, nevertheless, your friend."

Of course, a considerable amount of weighing is good. We can't go headlong into everything without getting entirely too many bumps even for our own good . . .

LEARN PEOPLE

If I were you, May, and wanted that big personality that you desire, I'd go about learning PEOPLE. And I'd be eager to know both the good and bad in them. And I'd never be over-critical either . . .

I'd also spend a certain amount of time each day reading about men and women who have lived successfully. What were their methods of success. How did they approach life, day by day . . .

I would simply wallow a little in their mistakes, and follow them right down to the edge of the river of misery, and I wouldn't hate them for these mistakes, either. I'd merely see them as human happenings, and say with Goethe: But by the grace of God, I might have been that man . . .

I'd spend some time reading the Bible . . . There isn't a human experience that we can't find there . . . I wouldn't fail to put in an evening or two with the Proverbs . . . and I wouldn't leave out the Lamentations . . . The original sob-articles of all time we find there . . .

WATCH HEALTH

Then, also, I'd see to my health . . . Headaches, backaches, footaches . . . imaginary illness would have such a toboggan slide out of my life that no one could meet me that they wouldn't want to be within radius of me just to catch hold of the spark of good health emanating from all directions . . .

Yes, indeed, there are many ways to develop personality . . . I have witnessed plain men and women walk right out into the daylight and almost look up into the sun . . .

There is nothing too big for a human being to accomplish . . .

But day by day, we learn how. It doesn't come to us as it did to Paul on the way to Damascus . . .

If it did we would all be going to Damascus instead of attending to our own busines . . .

And no one of us would get by, for the crowd . . .

DON'T YEARN! WORK! FAY KING'S ADVICE TO CLIMB LIFE'S HILL

By FAY KING

It is an utter waste of time to become blue and discouraged because you cannot instantly become someone far beyond what you are.

It would be as foolish to stand at the bottom of the hill lamenting because you are not at the top without making one effort to climb.

Yet step by step the mightiest peaks have been scaled by some.

Step by step miles of ground can be covered, and so step by step in self improvement we rise.

Instead of being blue and discouraged, begin right now to make an effort to improve the present, whatever it may be.

Until you have made the most of, and become the best of, what you are you are not prepared for something better.

STOUT LINEN IN TOWN TAILORINGS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

PITTSBURGH'S HOT DAYS, show up linen for the smart, comfortable thing it is amongst city dwellers. Even the classic white jacket and skirt made its appearance, but it was the darker fabrics, and those linens woven in tweed patterns which were most interesting.

TIME WAS, and not so long ago, when a linen ensemble was something to be worn once and then sent, crushed and weary, to the laundry. The new linens, however, decline to wrinkle disgustingly, would never stoop to shringing, go into prints and tints that were undreamed of among good linen circles a decade ago, and generally join in the ingenuity of all modern fabrics. Many of them are treated to a waterproofing process which is proof against perspiration as well as sudden downpours.

AS A MUGGY DAY choice linen has several highly individual excellences to offer. It will not cling to one's humid skin, whether or not it is waterproofed, and that makes for coolness that defies the thermometer. Nothing looks more fresh and trig than linen, so that temperature of the innocent bystander also benefits by ensembles made from it. It looks as well with dark accessories as it does with mid-summer white, which gives it great variety, and in the heavier qualities used for real tailoring a true minimum of lingerie beneath it will suffice the proprieties. Linen hats, hand bags and shoes are heading for great summer popularity, too.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Care Immediately for Summer Skin Diseases

During the summer months many persons become afflicted with skin disorders and inflammations. I am sure that in most instances these disturbances could be prevented if proper precautions were taken.

Dr. Copeland

For example, "impetigo contagiosa" a contagious and inflammatory disease of the skin, is frequently encountered during the summer. Though it ordinarily affects children, it is sometimes seen in adults. It is caused by a germ that readily spreads from one individual to another.

The disease is transmitted by infected dogs and cats. During the warm weather its occurrence is common in schools, camps, beaches and summer resorts where proper sanitary measures are lacking. Since the disease is highly contagious, the victim of impetigo contagiosa should be isolated from other children and adults. Care should be taken so that the infection is not spread by soiled towels, clothes and eating utensils.

"Ringworm," or "athlete's foot," is another common skin infection. This disease is especially prevalent at beaches and summer resorts where people walk about without shoes or slippers. Often it can be traced to contaminated water in large public swimming pools. I am glad to say that adequate preventive measures are being taken so that in all probability the disease will not be as common this summer as in former years.

Skin rashes in individuals sensitive to certain foods are more often seen during the summer months than in cold weather. After eating certain things, such as sea food, tomatoes or berries, the skin may begin to itch and become inflamed.

As a rule, this is due to a sensitivity to specific substances. These substances are usually proteins found in certain foods.

Never neglect a skin disorder, regardless of how slight or trivial it may appear to you. Do not resort to home remedies. Bear in mind that there are many different forms of skin eruptions, some of which require special treatment. Early recognition and prompt treatment of a severe skin disturbance will prevent it from becoming a chronic and disagreeable disorder.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Avis Agrees to Go to Room

Avis Arlen did not wait for the end of Lillian's sentence. At the first mention of my father's name, she sprang from the couch with a vehemence that belied the dramatic exhibition of nervous, timorous weakness she had just been staging, and cried:

"Oh! I'll go back right away. But you must help me get back through the window. If I go back through the corridor, he might hear me and know I'd broken my promise to him. But I didn't think going out of the window to the balcony for a bit of fresh air was breaking it. Do you think he'll consider that it was?"

There was no pretence in her voice now. It was raw with fear, and again I was amazed at the hold which her patent claustrophobia had upon her. My father's threat to lock her up in a room if she disobeyed him had had the same effect that an earlier similiar threat from Lillian and me had brought out—to reduce her to terror-stricken obedience.

Lillian employed a bit of "applied psychology" in answering her, waiting at least a second before she spoke, while Avis' terrified eyes were fixed upon her.

AVIS AGREES

"I don't think the question need ever come up," she said judicially at last. "We'll boost you into that window right away, and trust to Providence that your mother won't wake up and scream. Even if she does, and Mr. Spencer should hear her and investigate, we're all here to swear that you didn't go out into the corridor, as he forbade you to do. But you must come with us now, this minute, and get back through the window."

"All right," the girl replied weakly, drawing a long, tremulous breath. "I'll do anything you say. Hugh!" as she turned back to him with an appealing gesture, "You'll help me through the window, won't you? I'm so trembly I'm afraid to try it with anybody else, and you're so strong."

"He's so strong," Lillian repeated—and I wondered if Hugh caught the delicately devilish laughter in her voice—"that he can balance himself on that bedslat on one foot, and toss you through the window with one hand, doing it so lightly and with such infinite skill that you'll probably land in your bed with one ear on your pillow."

Hugh gave an inarticulate little sound which I knew spelled exasperation, and Lillian, who generally knows when to stop, rose abruptly.

"Come on out now," she said. "Madge you would better stay inside so that you can answer the door if anybody knocks."

Avis rushed swiftly toward the French windows, hauling Hugh after her by means of the clinging grasp with which she had made sure his hand would not get away from her. As Lillian followed them and passed me, she spoke in the noiseless way she has so perfected.

"Pipe this!" she said. "It's going to be good. No reason why you can't have a ringside seat, even if you are doorkeeper. Plant yourself just inside the windows and get an eyeful."

MIRTHFUL SPECTACLE

I did as she bade me, and from the vantage point of the curtained French windows I witnessed a mirth-provoking little spectacle. For, despite Lillian's prediction of Hugh's prowess, it proved to be an impossible thing, owing to the height of the window and the narrowness of its opening, for him to lift Avis through it. All he could do was to hold the bed slat steady while Avis, with Lillian steadying her, wriggled her way up the board, hitching up an inch at a time, and finally clambered in at the window.

Avis is not remarkable for her grace, and so much of her appeal depends upon her costuming and makeup that she was under a severe handicap in the hitching stunt. I was reminded irresistibly of the comment Mary had made upon her—that Avis "looked so much like a horse in her pajamas." I was tempted to say 'Giddap'."

Almost as mirth-provoking as the appearance of Avis was the distressed and embarrassed look upon Hugh Grantland's face, and when Avis disappeared through the window I hurried back to my chair and looked up innocently as they came back through the windows.

"Did you get her back safely?" I asked.

"Yes, the anointed little liar," Lillian said viciously.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By Josephine Culbertson

Timing the Defense

The old axiom "a trick is a trick" is not always true at Contract Bridge. It is, of course, self-evident that whether the trick taken is the first or the last in the suit, in itself it has exactly the same value, but in cases where one side or the other has a defensive trick, it may make all the difference in the world when that trick is taken. In other words, it may be important to exhaust the Dummy of cards in the suit before winning a trick with an Ace or a King. It may be wise to wait to take a trick with the Ace on the second round rather than the first in order to be able to give your partner a third-round ruff, or it may be vital to take the trick at the first opportunity in order to be free to develop another line of counter-attack that may save the day. The question of the time factor in the play of a hand at Bridge is not at all generally understood. With most Bridge players it is too much on a hit-or-miss basis.

The hand below, played in a Duplicate tournament of the United States Bridge Association, is an interesting example of the wisdom of deciding which trick you should take in a suit.

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 9 3 2 ♡ 8 6 5 ◇ A K 9 5 4 ♣ 9 6
♠ A Q 10 6 5 ♡ A Q ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ J 7 2	North West East South	♠ 8 ♡ K 10 9 7 4 ◇ Q 6 ♣ K Q 8 5 3
	♠ K J 7 4 ♡ J 5 2 ◇ J 10 8 ♣ A 10 4

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West's Rebid of the spades was based upon the fact that he could not find any other good Rebid in the hand, and yet his hand was of such type that he wanted to play it for game, provided his partner displayed further interest. Obviously, East, in view of his partner's Opening bid, should show both of his five-card suits. When West later showed a preference for hearts as compared with clubs, it really meant that if a game was to be undertaken he felt that it was wiser to contract for ten tricks than eleven. East's bid of four hearts is stretching matters a little.

A diamond was opened, and North won the first two tricks. The third lead of that suit was ruffed by the Declarer. It was, of course, apparent to him that if he was to fulfill his contract he must be able to draw the adverse trumps in three rounds, and in order to accomplish this he must have a means of entering his own hand after winning the first two trump rounds with the Ace and Queen. An obvious entry would be to ruff a spade after cashing the Ace, but this would bring the closed han's trump holding down to three, and he would not have his tricks established when the trumps were gone.

Merely to analyze this line of play is to condemn it, so East adopted his other alternative—namely, an attempt to establish a club re-entry in his own hand—in other words, drive out the Ace. Before leading trumps, he led the King of clubs from his own hand, and South jumped up with the Ace and immediately returned the suit. This the Declarer won, laid down the Ace and Queen of hearts, and followed with the Ace of spades. He returned to his own hand by ruffing a spade. The club suit was now established, and as both opponents had a trump remaining, four-odd was safe.

Consider now what would have happened had South refrained from winning the first round of clubs. If the Declarer tries to establish clubs before drawing trumps, North will ruff, and if the Declarer draws trump before establishing clubs, his only entry to his own hand to draw the remaining trumps is a ruff of spades, and in thus shortening his trump suit the defending side will be in a position to bring into play the established diamonds when they secure the lead with the club Ace.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Indelible rouge, which is enjoying a remarkable popularity, won't always evaporate before the use of clensing cream. But soap suds will usually cause it to do the disappearing act.

When joints are stiff and the sprint for street car or bus is ambling, something has to be done. Inertia may be creeping up on one, and that won't do.

Women of all ages need a certain amount of exercise. Swimming and walking are ideal, golf is helpful, regular gym work is of benefit.

Even femmes whose teeth go grinding at the mention of exercise can stretch themselves and carry themselves splendidly—chest high, shoulders easy, tummy flat. That's half the battle against the gentleman with the scythe and the long white whiskers.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Removing the Coat

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Recently when eating in a restaurant I removed my coat and hung it on the coat rack alongside the booth where we were going to sit, which I thought was the correct thing to do. I noticed, however, that I was the only woman who did this. We did not eat at a table, but in a booth, and a coat is quite cumbersome to sit in, and also there is the possibility of dropping food on the coat, and I thought it correct to take it off. Was this correct?

2—When dancing, are the little beaded bags, usually called "after dark bags," carried on the dance floor?

PERPLEXED.

1—It was quite all right for you to hang your coat on the coat-rack if you wished to, but usually women do prefer to just drop their coats off their shoulders and leave them where they are.

2—This is a question of choice. Often these bags aren't very comfortable or convenient to carry while you are dancing, but this is for you to decide.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now

(With oodles of thanks to Jane Savage)

A few months ago here we listed a few predictions by Jane Savage, which arrested the attention of locals. Letters from all parts of the country came in—asking for data on Miss Savage, and imploring her to offer more. While a number of her statements are startling, we think they make diverting reading. At any rate, Miss Savage has set forth a columnful. We thank her for the day off.

The following brief statements embody the results of fifteen years of research by a small group who have sought to clarify the symbolism of the Bible prophecies of Daniel and John in Revelations. Basing their work on the findings of scholars who believed the prophecies were to come true at this time, this present day group has sought by means of astrology and numerology to translate these prophecies into the simpler phraseology of every day life, by giving locations and approximate time. Watch prophecy become history!

Had General Goethals listened to the ancient legend of "The Sleeping Lion" under the Culebra Cut when he built the Panama Canal, hundreds of millions of dollars and thousands of lives would have been saved. A volcano which has risen more than 7,000 feet in the last seven years will blow the Panama Canal to the four winds of heaven.

Was it not divine inspiration which made Teddy Roosevelt purchase another waterway from the Atlantic to the Pacific? It belongs to the U. S. A., and Lake Nicaragua is big enough to hold our fleet and one or two more. The cataclysm that wrecks the Penama Canal will automatically open the Nicaragua waterway within less than four miles of the Pacific Ocean.

Alaska will be the summer resort of the world. The climate of the Western Hemisphere will change so rapidly during the next few years and the ice cap will so recede that a temperate climate will supersede the frigidity which thus far has kept man from living in comfort in the North.

The ice cap of Greenland hides a civilization greater than any in the Far East.

A tremendous earthquake, running from the northeast to the southeast of Greenland, uncovers this "archeological find" and will cause a tidal wave in the Atlantic Ocean, which may spell disaster to New York City and vicinity, both in lives lost and financial collapse.

What causes the hurricanes in the Caribbean Sea? The part of Atlantis, that broke off from Yucatan about 9,500 years ago, is again rising to the light of our day. There is much land under the Caribbean and under the Pacific, which is very near the surface of the water and, in replacing itself, will cause some of the dry land to sink.

Why the people of the U. S. A. had to build great industries? So that the generation now being born may give generously of its material supply to a planet crushed by war, and so exemplify The Brotherhood of Man.

Every nation on the planet has been preparing for war since 1919. They are now only awaiting the order to "Fire!" Millions and millions will die in the next few years, as has been foretold for thousands of years.

The world conflict, which began in August, 1914, and which the Bible calls Armageddon, will probably enter its final stages during 1934. All the people in the U. S. A. are not cowards, nor are they looking for more power. They demand food, clothing and houses, and will take them if they cannot earn them.

Will it be France, Germany, Austria or King Carol, of Rumania that will start the first car down the roller-coaster of turmoil that is about to crash down on humanity? Ere the leaves fall, Europe and Asia will be in the thick of the last struggle man will know for many, many hundreds of years.

The Soviet has been massing both men and arms on the Siberian and Manchurian borders for nearly three years. That was their first bid for world rule. Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin are certainly a strange and weird triangle. Each struggling for world power. Japan as runner up. France in her usual position of blaming someone else for her own troubles.

What has Russia really gained? She had a tremendous army fairly well equipped, but in her lust for world power and more money she has dissipated much of her armed strength. Her air force, which is large, will not be as effective as she thinks it will, because tiny manless airplanes will be used.

Will the mighty mass of troops, that Russia has already sent to the Siberian and Manchurian borders, be able to quell the uprising of a nation whose people have been called scholars rather than warriors? The Chinese are patient and long suffering; yet in this day and age it is written that they shall rise.

China and Japan have "face" to protect. A scholar can be more cunning than one of little learning.

It is probable that the attack will come from the Soviet, as they think the Fascisti are their greatest rivals for world power. The Soviet has sold enough arms and munitions to the Moslems to cause the downfall of Russia.

The Moslem has a quality of patience unknown in the Western World. He, too, desires to rule the world. He will be the last to enter the conflict that is about to encompass humanity and will almost win. He watches gleefully as Europe and Asia become armed camps while civil wars and rebellions rage.

Austria is helpless and must blow always with the stronger wind. Hitler is a little bit scared that the Royalists might win for a short time. And it is quite possible that a grandson of the Kaiser may rule a much disillusioned and ruined country.

Diplomacy changes. Europe has always sneered at our attempts to make diplomacy open and honest, saying we were far too visionary. Far better for Europe had she learned from the New World baby instead of trying to set a false example. Her lies about hidden agreements, seeking private advantages, have been the cornerstone of the old diplomacy and the cause of the war just ahead.

Roger Pryor Promoted To Star

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 12.—Hello! Carl Laemmle, Jr., got a glimpse of Roger Pryor, under contract to Universal as a featured player in a "rough cut" (no cracks, please!) of Mae West's new cinema, "It Ain't No Sin," for which he was loaned to Paramount, and decided to add the former Broadway leading man to the studio's roster of stars.

Roger's first top-billing role will be in "The Fast Talker," a yarn by Edythe Martin.

Ah, at last a new twist! Grady Sutton was acting like a columnist. He said to Glen Boles:

"Who was that actress I saw you with last night?" And Glen replied: 'That was no actress—that was her double!"

Irving Thalberg, M-G-M's ace producer, has concluded a big deal with Frank Lloyd, whose farsightedness just netted him a nifty bank account increase.

Some months ago, Frank purchased the film rights to "Mutiny On the Bounty," the Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall sea story thriller. At the time, Frank wanted to independently produce the yarn, but since Thalberg became enthusiastic over the story, a deal was completed whereby Lloyd disposed of the rights to M-G-M and will direct the film, a special, which has a million-dollar budget.

Wallace Beery, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery will share stellar honors in the piece. Lloyd will take the entire company to the South Seas for filming.

Boulevard buzzing—Bill Ohl (his pappy is assistant to Frank Murphy at Warners') and Dot Lloyd sneaked off and were married t'other day...Wynne Gibson cracks that she has Al Rosen, Ad Schulberg, Charles Feldman, Noll Gurney, Phil Berg, Art Stebbins, Bert Allenberg, Myrt Blum, George Landy and Dick Nunt representing her, but she's still out of work!...Hugh O'Connell, that classy Broadway comedian, just landed a long term ticket with Universal...Lyle Talbot will spend his vacation by playing in summer stock somewhere...Preston ("Strictly Dishonorable") Sturges will direct his own yarn, "A Cup of Coffee," which concerns an advertising guy, for Universal...The Joe E. Browns sailed into town Thursday...Al Dubin, the lyric feller, is back from New York and only eats three steaks a day. On a diet, no doubt...Harry Behn is dishing up an original story for Lou Ostrow's production at Universal.

Tony, Tom Mix's famous horse which is traveling with Tom's circus, is getting the worst of the deal—movie fans are actually PULLING out his tail, hair by hair! And his mane is no more at all!

Carol Tevis, who prides herself for being able to play "dumb dames" on the screen, was tagged for speeding by a motorcycle cop, who handed her the ticket with the crack:

"Sorry, Miss, but youth must be served!"

Family Stuff for Fun

Frankie Darro and his ma, Aline MacMahon, in "The Merry Frinks," family life comedy, opening Thursday in the Warner, along with a second feature, Paul Lukas and Constance Cummings in "Glamour." The latter photoplay is a screen version of an Enda Ferber tale.

Your Theater and Mine -:- By KARL KRUG

WHISPERING GALLERY

United Artists executives are amazed at the financial debacle of the talking version of "Sorrell and Son" . . . They thought the "take" from the new picture would top the monetary return of the silent photoplay . . . The first "Sorrell and Son" still holds the box-office receipt record of any film ever released by the company, with the exception of the Chaplin comedies . . . The solution of the passive popularity with which the oral "Sorrell and Son" has been greeted is simple . . . A million-dollar property was entrusted to an unknown English director, Jack Raymond by name, who had never made anything except comedies in his life . . . When the story called for an overseer of the type of Frank Borzage or Herbert Brenon . . . It was Brenon who made the original picture, and what a job he did! . . . And, in the place of such silent favorites as Louis Wolheim, Nils Asther, Anna Q. Nilsson, Mary Nolan and Mickey McBan was a troupe of unknown Britishers . . . Only H. B. Warner was left of the original cast . . . Despite his sterling performance the action lagged and the fine assistance he received from Hugh Williams didn't help much . . . Just another Hollywood mistake . . . Permitting such a priceless possession as the screen rights of "Sorrell and Son" to go to an English studio for production.

Mention of Mickey McBan recalls that few of the juvenile screen sensations are durable . . . Mickey has disappeared and Jackie Coogan is heard of but seldom . . . M-G-M is having a difficult time casting Jackie Cooper . . . Leon Janney, who burst over the screen horizon with a crash in "Courage" a few years ago, is jobless in New York . . . Only Frankie Darro seems to hold attention as he grows older . . . He works regularly and will be seen in "The Merry Frinks" due in the Warner Thursday . . . To my mind, Hugh Herbert, who has a role in the same picture, is the best comedian unearthed by Hollywood in years . . . It was Marion Davies who averted one of those "movie boners" you hear about during the making of her "Operator 13" . . . The Mills Brothers appear as slave entertainers in the picture and for their exclusive use a primitive Negro chant, "Jungle Fever," was composed by Walter Donaldson and Howard Deitz . . . During her first scene with the Mills boys, Miss Davies caught the plaint of a saxophone . . . So, she reminded Director Richard Boleslavsky that the sax was unknown during the Civil War, the period of "Operator 13" . . . That's why you'll hear only trumpets, trombone and brass when "Operator 13" reaches the Penn Friday.

BABY TAKE A BOW!

Stories with little Shirley Temple as the motivating character continue to drift East from Hollywood. One of the hardest jobs a director faces is to make the prodigies cry for the cameras. The other day Shirley was told to weep for a scene, but the tears refused to come.

In an effort to help, Shirley's mother said:

"Remember that poor little dog we saw get run over the other day?" Quicker than it takes to tell it, Shirley replied:

"Yes, Mamma, I remember. But that was the other day. We can't do anything about it now!"

HIGHER EDUCATION

Says Advertising Age:

"A lot of research experts insists that the public possesses an average 11-year-old intelligence. The most convincing evidence, they declare, is the remarkable popularity of Joe Penner."

Says Paramount Pictures:

"Joe Penner has been signed for the leading role in "College Rhythm!" "

MR. ROGOW COMPLAINS

"I'm really surprised at you," postcards Melvin Rogow, of Eldridge street. "As an old newspaperman you certainly proved a sucker for publicity gag.

"In your Thursday column you mentioned that Spitalny's contracts with the girls in his band forbids their marrying until 1936. Don't you know that any contract that interferes with future marriage is invalid? Phil and his press agents certainly took you in, old boy."

Mr. Rogow must have read hurriedly. The line said, "If you'll take Noel Meadow's word for it." Ho, hum. One never knows when those little protective clauses will come in handy, does one?

Gaynor and Farrell Star In Fulton Movie

By KARL KRUG

Hollywood reverts to its talking screen adolescence in "Change of Heart," the latest incumbent of the screen in the Fulton.

Miss Janet Gaynor has an unhappy time of it in this unhappy film adaptation of Kathleen Norris' novel, "Manhattan Love Song." Serving as the first co-starring vehicle in a year and a half for Miss Gaynor and Charlie Farrel, "Change of Heart" is an ordinary program vehicle that has but little except the names in the cast to recommend it.

Jimmy Dunn and Ginger Rogers are the other top names in the billing, and while they struggle valiantly to bring some semblance of order out of the chaotic atmosphere in which each has been thrown they can do but little with the morose material handed them. The few good lines in the picture have been given to Dunn, but, for the most part, the dialogue is an artificial bore.

Misses Gaynor and Rogers and Dunn and Farrell form a quartet that graduates from a California college, and trek to New York to carve out careers for themselves. Their love lives are so scrambled that it almost requires a certified public accountant to keep track of the romances. Miss Gaynor is in love with Farrell (why, I'm sure I haven't the slightest idea); Farrell is in love with Miss Rogers; Dunn is in love with Miss Gaynor, but Ginger kicks over the apple cart by falling for a city slicker played by none other than our old Pittsburgh friend, Kenneth Thomson.

So what happens? So what do you think happens? Miss Gaynor and Mr. Farrell get married, and for no reason at all, the fadeout also implies that Dunn and Ginger are about to take the plunge into matrimony. Miss Gaynor is just a little too sweet in "Change of Heart" to make herself credulous, and as for Mr. Farrell, well, you know Charlie. The continuity is jerky and the direction bad, and one wonders at times just how Hollywood can keep a serious face as it ships such stuff East.

The Gaynor-Farrell public is undoubtedly still a large one, but such fairy tales as "Change of Heart" will do little to enhance their already diminished box-office power. It is too bad Fox didn't have a change of heart about making "Change of Heart."

Joe E. Brown At Dinner

Joe E. Brown has returned to Hollywood, his mouth still watering in memory of epicurean delights. Joe thought he did some eating when he played "Elmer the Great" on the stage in Los Angeles, and had to stuff his face nightly with huge plates of food.

But this was mincing, compared to ploughing through a 35-course dinner he partook of in China. There were five kinds of duck and four kinds of chicken. Joe vows the thirtieth course was soup.

According ot the comedian, the Japanese theater-owners do even stranger things to movie titles than the producers do in the beginning. In Japan, Joe's picture, "Local Boy Makes Good," was retitled "There Always a Girl Behind a Champion." His "Fireman Save My Child" was switched to "How to Play Baseball."

Joe is the only visiting American ever elected a member of the Sino-American Club in Shanghai.

Back to Mayflower Goes Bing's Line

According to a family trdee compiled by Ted Crosby, one of Bing's brothers, the singing star can trace his heritage right back to the Mayflower, even to the big boss of the expedition.

Governor William Brewster was the founder of the Crosby line. He had a daughter, Patience, who married Thomas Prince, who became a Governor himself and, in addition was the chap originally responsible for a crooning descendant.

Echoes From Cabarets

By THE ROUNDER

Eddie Peyton is counting on Connie's "Hot Chocolates," who open in his roadhouse tomorrow night, to prove as big a success as Ozzie Nelson, who packed in a near-record crowd Tuesday night. At 10:30 Tuesday every table in the house was either taken or reserved by fans of Ozzie Nelson and Harriett Hilliard, who still claim that they are enjoying single bliss. The "Hot Chocolates" include, among others, Leroy Smith and his orchestra, rated above Cab Calloway by some; Avis Andrews, songstress; "Peg Leg" Bates, the one-legged dancer; and Jonnie Odgins, the pantomime artist, and dancer formerly with "Blackbirds."

Since Nat Nazarro, who is emceeing at the Show Boat, began doing that great tumble-dance of his, the Boat dance floor hasn't needed sweeping. He tells us that he and Margie Nelson are still waiting for the auspicious time for the old wedding bells. But Freda Pope's gang aren't falling behind in marriages. Bill Ashe, Longview Farms barker, has just tied with Carrie Bell McNichols, sister-in-law of Larry Rosenberger, the Show Boat parker, who knotted last month.

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

In Which the Customers Do the Work.

"MY DEAR Mr. Hellinger," writes Virginia Rose. "This may be a dull story, but to me it is a nightmare. I committed a crime. I got married—and Life punished me.

"I am one of those girlish-looking mothers who manage somehow to look attractive no matter how makeshift the outfit.

"Let's start at the end of my marriage. I'm still married although I haven't seen my husband for more than three years—nor does he support our child. If they had passed the divorce reform bill it would have helped a lot of deserving people. But—well, I suppose it comes under the heading of 'none so blind,' etc.

"Since my daughter is a junior in high school, her personal needs and general care exceed my meager income. If you knew how little I earn you would laugh at my use of the ritzy noun. But there were days when I had no income at all and we had no food and we'd go to sleep at 8 every night in an attempt to drug our senses.

"Secret tears were becoming monotonous. I was desperate with worry. During the winter we had to tuck bottles of hot water in our bed for comfort. We have but one room, and there are only two pieces of actual furniture.

"We had been accustomed to a decent standard of living and I tried to shield the child with every bit of strength I had. She needs glasses, dental care and has extravagant tastes such as an occasional movie or a malted milk. It would have been a simple matter for me to commit suicide.

"Eventually I was driven to seek aid from the Department of Public Welfare. I was made to feel like a criminal. They took my whole pedigree and said that my appearance did not substantiate my plight. Why, they wanted to know, did I look so young for my age?

"They herded me with other unfortunates from one room to another, making me present proofs of every claim and sending me around town on useless trips with coins borrowed from friends. I had to repeat my history over and over, trying always not to appear too neat nor too intelligent.

"I had to apologize for looking decent, or young, and explain that being handy with the needle accounted for my style even though I was wearing cast-off garments. I had to show them my room, its contents, relate our habits and explain how we had managed to exist thus far.

"I cried out that I was able to take care of myself, and that all I wanted of them was to improve my child's living conditions and give her a decent chance until old enough to make her own way.

"Finally, through the Desertion Bureau, they located my husband and I was told to take out a warrant. This was refused me, however, because he was beyond the jurisdiction of the New York courts.

"Months went by while my case was pending in the Welfare Department. How we managed to keep alive through the winter was a miracle. The ordeal has left scars that no luxury can ever totally efface.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS «»

The great majority of Pittsburgh folk never get the opportunity to see the work of our fair city's most gifted and most widely known comedian. This would be Lukie Barnett, father of Vincent Barnett, who leaped into prominence in the movies after taking to Hollywood the strange trade he learned from his father, that of a professional "ribber." Luke Barnett is at once the most widely known and the least-known actor. There is scarcely a city where his name is not familiar to at least one prominent citizen upon whom he has "worked." Yet, since he has to keep in the background in order to be effective, his face and manner of earning a living are known to comparatively few residents even of his home town.

What an artist he is! Where other clowns require careful rehearsal, our Mr. Barnett can do an impromptu act that will convulse even those who are on the "in," and do it with as much finish as if he had rehearsed it for months. This was proven yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Variety Club for the "special benefit" of Charlie Rosenzweig, new sales manager of First Division Film Exchange here.

For this occasion Luke was an exhibitor—of the type Walter Winchell has tagged a dialectician. And such troubles as he had had with First Division—my, my, something terrible! And no satisfaction by calling at the office.

"Out to lunch" on the door, every time he called.

"Don't tell me," he observed, "dems fellows don't eat every day?"

And so on.

John Maloney of M-G-M, acting as volunteer interrupter, was given his when our complaining exhibitor referred to his opening tormentor as "Mr. Baloney."

The climax came—in tears—when Johnny Harris gave him a lusty slap and, with the aid of Jim Balmer, hustled him out of the room for annoying a guest of the club.

Aftet later, of course, Mr. Rosenzweig was introduced to Mr. Barnett.

One of our real actors—Mr. Barnett.

When "The Curtain Rises" the curtain on the summer season of the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse in the Arnold Theater, 414 South Braddock avenue, Monday, June 25, the audience will be seeing a play directed by Arthur Mariow, a Pittsburgher, who was seen in George Sharp productions on the Pitt several years ago. Besides stock work in other cities, he also has acted on Broadway in "The Tyrant," "The Man On Stilts," "Rendezvous," "There You Are," "Street Fiddler" and "Roadside." "The Curtain Rises," comedy by B. M. Kaye, was a New York production of the season just "officially" closed.

"The Green Pastures" will be showing again in Pittsburgh in the autumn, and this time with Richard B. Harrison as a star. Mr. Harrison created the leading role of "de Lawd" in this long-lived play, and no one but himself has played it since. It opened in it in New York on the night of February 26, 1930. Yet he is not called its "star" now, and will not be until the play opens its new season September 28 in Norfolk, Va. Shortly afterwards, in October, "The Green Pastures" will play in Pittsburgh. Other Pennsylvania engagements will be in New Castle and Erie.

When Mr. Harrison steps upon the stage for the first time as a star he will have passed his seventieth birthday and will be making his 1,500th appearance in the part he created.

When this play returns to Broadway for a second engagement next March, it will be a little more than five years old, a fact that should give playwrights a hint. Remembering its success and that of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," although they are as far apart as the poles, write a good Negro play and your fortune is made. Maybe. There'll still be the job of finding a producer.

Next season Pittsburgh will get a glimpse of that great historical pageant "Romance of a People" that created such a sensation in New York last fall and later was shown in Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Detroit. In revised and dramatized form it will make a transcontinental tour to the Pacific Coast, with Pittsburgh included in the itinerary. Productions will require a staff of several hundred persons.

Katharine Cornell is back in New York, the seventy-fourth city she has visited since she began her 17,000-mile road tour last November.

"It has been wonderful, you know," she said, speaking of the tour, which left Broadway goggle-eyed at its duration and success.

"I've never done anything like it. Every time there's a road tour everyone perks up and says this is incredible, but this one was incredible, at least to me.

By William Lewis

"Why, some places we visited, an appalling number of people who came to see us hadn't ever seen a real play before. I heard more than once of people who had really good seats, and then were bothered because they thought if they sat so far down in front the play might 'flicker.' "

LOSS OF CLOSE GAMES HURT DODGERS IN FLAG RACE

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Hurst May Help Bruins, Adds Power If Aroused, Trade Also Aids Phils.

Old Buc Hoodoo Back. Racehorse Equipment. Stars Dislike Running.

Assuming that the shift from a hopeless trailer to a club having a pennant chance will cause Don Hurst to display a different spirit, there is hardly any question that the Cubs strengthened their machine and made themselves more formidable as flag contenders by the trade in which they obtained the veteran first baseman from the Phils in exchange for Dolph Camilli. Not that the Phils didn't profit also, for they got a younger and more ambitious player, who may be expected to hustle, to replace an apparently dissatisfied regular whose half-hearted work made him of little value to his club.

Don Hurst

In his spiritless Philadelphia form, which saw him drop from a batting average of .339 in 1932 to a mark of .267 last season and practically the same figures this year, Hurst wouldn't be worth much to the Cubs or to any other team. But it won't be surprising if the change that finds him being kicked upstairs to a pennant contender has the effect of putting new life into the former Phil and restoring the stride in which he was a consistent .300 hitter of the slugging type. If that happens, the replacement that the Bruins have obtained for Manager Charley Grimm will mean a big gain in punch as well as experience, as compared with the outgoing Camilli.

CASEY TERMS BARTELL AWKWARD SLIDER

The Dodgers came to town reporting another cripple on their list in the person of Shortstop Linus Frey, who is in drydock with a spike wound near his left kneecap, suffered when he tried to tag out Dick Bartell at second base in one of the stormy games with the Phils last week. Bartell is the gent who almost spiked Arky Vaughan not long ago and later accused Vaughan of having deliberately beaned him when he was struck on the head by a ball thrown by the Pirate shortstop in an attempt to complete a double play.

Brooklyn players recall, too, that it was Bartell's spikes that put Joe Judge out of commission for six weeks last season. Some of the Dodgers are reported to have been openly hostile toward Bartell after the spiking of Frey, but Ed Murphy found Manager Stengel taking a more charitable view of the cutting. "I would not say that Bartell did exactly what he meant to do when he cut Frey," Casey remarked, "but I will say of Bartell that for an experienced major league player, he is the most awkward fellow I ever saw going into a base. He has been playing baseball long enough to know how to slide so he will not spike players on other teams."

OLD BUC JINX RETURNS WITH DODGERS

The Pirates were prepared to tangle with an old hoodoo in the Dodger series, as the Brooklyn club recently added to its pitching staff the veteran left-hander, Tom Zachary, following his unconditional release by the Braves. Zachary was the source of many Buccaneer headaches while with the Boston club. Last season he slowed down to an even break in four games against the Rovers, but previously he had them licked almost as soon as he started against them. He won six of his first eight games against Pittsburgh after coming into the National League. His complete record against the Corsairs is 10 wins in 16 tries.

Tom Zachary

Tom pitched one victory, one tie, and lost twice for the Braves this year before they turned him loose, and both the victory and the tie were hurled against the club for which he is now working. Zachary is 37, and this season is his seventeenth in the majors. He came up late in 1918 from Guilford College, and has served with six clubs—the A's, Senators, Browns, Yankees, Braves and Dodgers. Tom pitched in three World Series, including part of the fifth game of the 1925 Derby against the Pirates.

PILING EQUIPMENT ON RACEHORSE'S HEAD

An investigation as to how much equipment the modern trainer can pile on the head of a racehorse convinced George Krehbiel, Detroit turf authority, that it is plenty, in fact much more than is necessary at times. A horse with every possible bit of equipment on his head would wear a bridle, blinkers, heavy fleece nose band, a figure "8" and a tongue strap. The bridle, of course, is necessary. The blinkers are used to prevent a horse from seeing anything but the track in front of him, as there are thoroughbreds that will quit if another horse runs alongside of them.

The figure "8" is a piece of headgear with crossed straps over the front of the horse's head, the straps running down under the throat. It is used on heavy-headed racers; that is, horses that are strong pullers. The figure "8" allows a light jockey to control a heavy-pulling horse, as the slightest pressure of the "8" will shut off the animal's wind momentarily. The tongue strap is used merely to keep the tongue in place. The reason given for the huge fleece noseband is that the horse will be attracted by the band and will watch it, instead of looking around at other horses during the running of a race. But another reason is that many trainers have an idea that in a nose finish, if one horse has a bulging band the judges will see that first and pronounce him the winner.

DISLIKE RUNNING BUT BECOME CHAMPIONS

The theory that no man can do well in a sport which he does not like has been refuted in several notable cases. The late Andy Hastings loved baseball and was not fond of football or basketball, yet it was on the gridiron and the hardwood court that he won his greatest fame. Jimmy McLarnin says he never liked the fight game, in which he became a world standout. He remained in it only because it paid well. Two amateur cases involve a couple of the greatest runners of the day—Bob Kiesel, Pacific Coast sprint ace, and Bill Bonthron, Princeton's sensational miler and half-miler, the latter scheduled to meet Glen Cunningham and Gene Venzke in the "mile of the century" at Princeton on Saturday.

Bob Kiesel

The exceptional class of those two speed merchants has been demonstrated on numerous occasions. In the I. C. 4-A meet not long ago, Kiesel won both the 100 and 200-meter sprint crowns, while Bonthron captured the 800 and 1,500-meter titles. From the brilliance of their performances each year, you'd imagine that, like Cunningham, both make running almost a religion, but as a matter of fact, they dislike the sport. Kiesel would prefer to play bridge all afternoon or shoot a round of golf, and Bonthron would rather play baseball any day in the week. Each continues in running competition for only one reason—because his university expects it.

BAER, CARNERA 'PASS' SECOND EXAMINATION

NEW YORK, June 12.—(AP.)—Max Baer and Primo Carnera today were given their second physical examination in four days by physicians of the New York State Athletic Commission and reported in "fit physical condition" for the 15-round heavyweight championship fight in Madison Square Garden Bowl Thursday night.

The big champion was found to be suffering from a sore throat, but the doctors said the irritated condition of his throat was improving and should not bother him Thursday.

The official report of Drs. William Walker, Vincent Nardiello and Morris Beyer said:

At your request we again have examined both principals for the forthcoming heavyweight championship fight. We first examined Baer and found him in good condition, fully able to engage in a 15-round fight. We next examined Carnera. He had a slight pharyngitis, which is clearing up, and there is no reason at this time to interfere with the fight. Both men are in fine physical condition."

The two boxers were examined in separate rooms and met only for a moment, nodding a brief greeting to each other.

RETURN TO CAMPS

The report was given out by Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan and Bill Brown, chairman and commission member, respectively.

Baer came in from his camp at Asbury, Park, N. J., and Carnera from Pompton Lakes, N. J. Both returned after the examination.

The report on Carnera's sore throat confirmed advices yesterday from the champion's camp which said he was suffering from a slight cold. He spent the day in bed.

There was no outward evidence of any illness, however, and he and Baer both looked to be in good shape.

The examination, which was ordered after Brown's statement last week that Baer was in no condition to fight, was the last before the boxers weigh in Thursday afternoon for their heavyweight fight that night. The first examination by commission physicians was made last Friday, at which time both were reported in excellent physical condition.

JEFF PICKS PRIMO

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—(INS.)—Jim Jeffries, of Burbank, Cal., the former heavyweight champion, who won the title from Bob Fitzsimmons in 1897, favors Primo Carnera to defeat Max Baer in their title bout Thursday night. He says:

"I like Carnera because he is in better physical condition. Baer's layoff of one year will do him no good."

SALE PICKS UP

NEW YORK, June 12.—(INS.)—The public has responded so briskly to the restored confidence in the Primo Carnera-Max Baer world heavyweight title fight that a sale of $18,000, the biggest haul so far, was recorded through the windows at Madison Square Garden yesterday.

Moreover, the bookmakers, who had stopped taking all bets, again reopened their books, quoting 3 to 5 for any bet on Carnera and 6 to 5 for any on Baer.

The others named are Eric Pedley, the Los Angeles internationalist; H. W. STENGEL LIKES GIANT CHANCES FOR PENNANT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Neither brain trust investigations nor threatened steel strike worried Charles (Casey) Stengel, head man of the Brooklyn Dodgers, as he brought his team to town today. But the colorful and light-hearted Casey was not without his worries. The Brooklyn boss remarked:

"The big question confronting the Dodgers at the present and for many weeks past is how to prevent losing ball games by one run."

Stengel showed no bitterness whatever toward Memphis Bill Terry, manager of the league-leading New York Giants, who when asked about the Dodgers during a radio broadcast of last winter, said:

"O, are they still in the league?"

LIKES GIANT CLUB

Dwelling on the National League flag race, which has had his close scrutiny, Casey declared:

"Well, I think I should say that the Giants are the best looking club in the league, all things considered, with the Pirates second best and the Cardinals and the Cubs as very dangerous contenders.

"Terry is handling his pitchers perfectly and his team is hustling. Practically every time he puts in Herman Bell or Dolf Luque in the relief role they come through. And when other clubs resort to the relief trick they generally finish second. So you see Terry has a big edge there."

CLUB HANDICAPPED

Stengel's team came to Pittsburgh in sixth place. The Dodgers were picked for that spot or lower, yet Casey is far from satisfied. He has had 19 major and minor casualties since the bell rang, but he says that is not a good excuse for losing regularly. He elaborated:

"Other clubs have had their troubles, but are in the first division. Our big weakness is losing by a single tally. If we can correct this we would look a lot better. I will say, however, that every member of the Brooklyn Club is hustling and that is a big consolation to any manager."

Stengel predicts a bright future for Van Mungo, who has pitched well throughout the campaign. The big righthander has lost a lot of those close decisions which Casey spoke about.

The Buccos returned this morning from their Western tour. They spent yesterday in Indianapolis, where they defeated the Hoosiers of the American Association, 18 to 3. The score by innings:

Indianapolis	1	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	3	8	4

CONFABS SET FOR REGATTA

A meeting of the committee arranging the William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup regatta to be held under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club at Oakmont, Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15, will be held at the Oakmont Boat Club tonight.

In New York tomorrow, Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph, will confer with C. F. Chapman, secretary of the National Outboard Racing Commission, with regard to final plans for the mammoth event.

Meanwhile, work is being rushed on the preparation of the apparatus for the regatta. Three big barges are being made ready to serve as the judges' stand and the floats or boat pits, while the Oakmont Boat Club property is being spruced up generally for the occasion.

HURLINGHAM, Eng., June 12.—(AP.)—The invading United States polo team yesterday found an eight-goal handicap too big an obstacle and lost to the 16th and 18th Hussars regiments four 16 to 12. Seymour Knox, leader of the Americans, scored seven of his team's goals.

SOFTBALL PAIRINGS ANNOUNCED, TOURNAMENT UNDER WAY

MORE THAN 100 TEAMS READY FOR ACTION

The First Games!

Four of the teams in the Sun-Telegraph's softball tournament jumped off in the race for honors last evening.

The American Fruit Growers team defeated the U. S. Engineers, 5 to 3, at Schenley Oval in a Bracket I senior game, while the Calvary team downed the St. Peterites, 24-7, in the first junior game, in Bracket I, at Peabody High School.

Frank Guiher hit a home run for the Engineers.

By PHILIP GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary.

Of the more than 160 teams which entered the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's first annual amateur softball tournament, 98 had completed their registrations when the draw for the bracket play was made last night, and the list will go over the 100 mark when a bracket in the Beaver Valley is completed within the next few days.

Of the teams drawn, 58 are seniors, who will compete for the right to represent Pittsburgh in the national tournament under the auspices of the Hearst newspapers in Chicago in September.

Eight teams are intermediates and 16 juniors. Sixteen more are girls' teams.

BRACKETS ANNOUNCED

Aside from the seniors, the teams will vie for cups and medals and the championships in their divisions.

Many of the teams which did not complete their team and player registrations find themselves shut out. The entries were extended five days to give them every opportunity to get in, and, with the first games scheduled to get out of the way this week, no further grace could be offered.

The brackets appear elsewhere on this page. A master schedule tells which teams play each week before the playoffs, for which the winner and runner-up in each bracket will qualify. For instance, team No. 1 plays team No. 2, team No. 3 meets team No. 4, team No. 5 engages team No. 6 and team No. 7 opposes team No. 8 in each bracket this week.

MANAGERS ARRANGE GAMES

The managers of the teams must contact each other and arrange for the site of each game and the manager of each team must send in the result on a score card form which will be mailed out to the managers today.

With the exception of bracket No. 8 in the senior division and bracket No. 2 of the junior class, each bracket lists eight teams. In bracket No. 8 two teams are distantly removed from Pittsburgh, and arrangements will be made to have them play a best two out of three series to decide their bracket champion, which will qualify for the finals in Pittsburgh. The managers of these teams are requested to make such arrangements at once and notify the writer of their plans. There is one bye in bracket 2 of the junior class.

Teams interested in the Beaver Valley bracket will be brought together by Art Smith, of Ellwood City, within a few days. They will make up bracket No. 9 among the seniors.

The Ardara Lions were the only junior team in their section to register and arrangements will be made to take care of their entry.

Softball Slants

Manager Ray Gonzales, who pitches for his Covington Aces, has turned in two no-hit, no-run games. One of these contests went seven innings, the other nine. The Aces will compete in the junior class in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's softball tournament.

Alfonso Gonzales and Samuel Lango have been doing some fine work with their bats. Alfonso, the lead-off man, has reached first base in every contest played. The Covington club has won four straight and eight of its last nine games. Herry Pasquarelli and Frank Pelligrene, along with Manager Gonzales, do the pitching.

The Al Gump Lleswyn All Stars, of Altoona, boast an array of high school stars. The All Stars have lost only one game this year while winning 20. Ducky Fay, second baseman, has been fielding brilliantly. This team will play in the senior division.

Jim Ownes, Gerald Smith, Bob Mathews and Paul Johnson are the pitchers Manager James Miller can call upon for duty. Last year, the Lleswyn outfit won the Greater Altoona Church League championship and this season it is leading the loop by a wide margin. John Edgley and Arthur Oline, prominent businessmen of Altoona, sponsor the team.

Big Jim Spence, who is 6 feet 5½ inches tall, is the biggest man on the Altoona squad. He plays first base. Spence was an all-round athlete in college. Hermet Lane, who plays shortstop for the stars, plays baseball as well in the Juniata City League. Hartley Olsen, Altoona High School track star, has been doing the catching. Chick Clark was the star miler for the Altoona High School track team.

Paul and Woodrow Housare have been playing a fine game in the outfield for the All Stars. The brothers are good batsmen.

By HONUS WAGNER

To the Sports Editor:

I always had an idea that the fellows who whooped it up down on the Congo were kinda uncivilized, but then I read in the paper how a Congo opera is going to be put on in New York. There is a show from Africa playing there now at $2.75 per. So I guess the boys down there are not too native not to know what is going on. What I can't understand is how these show-people keep thinking up these ideas. I hope they do not dig up any cannibal baseball teams, if there is such a thing, and then bring them over here, but you never can tell these days.

Washington Crews In Brilliant Drills

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 12.—(AP.)—"Watch Washington" was the cry of rival crews encamped today for the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta Saturday.

The Huskies covered the full four-mile course yesterday in the fastest time any eight has registered during preliminary training. Al Ulbrickson's men were caught in 19 minutes 7 seconds, 36 seconds faster than California's time last Saturday.

The Washington freshmen were even more impressive. Starting at the two-mile mark, two lengths back of the varsity, the Huskies' yearlings were five lengths in front at the finish, clocked in the amazing time of 9:11. That represents the fastest time ever hung up for two miles.

H. J. BURGWIN TO REFEREE NET PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Howard J. Burgwin, veteran star of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, has been appointed official referee of the forty-sixth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships, getting under way on the clay courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club next Saturday and continuing thereon for nine days, until Sunday, June 24. In assuming the arbiter's post, the Golf Clubber succeeds his cousin, G. C. Burgwin, Jr., who served in the capacity of tourney judge in 1933.

Howard Burgwin

The new referee is admirably fitted both by temperament and experience for handling the exacting tasks proper to the position. He is genial, deeply interested in the game, popular with players and officers of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association, and thoroughly conversant with the numerous ramifications of tournament competition. As referee, he will be charged to a great extent with the selection of umpires and linesmen, with the making of decisions as to postponement or curtailment of matches because of weather conditions or advance of dusk, and with the rendering of pronouncements on questions of law, though not of fact, that may arise in the course of the titular action. Burgwin is not a member of any of the P. T. A. interclub league teams, but, as chairman of the important sanction and schedule committee of the net body, he is vitally concerned in the running of association affairs.

ENTRY LIST GROWS

Meanwhile Tourney Chairman Frank S. Smith reports a steady increase in the length of his various entry rosters for the championships. Word from Erie to P. T. A. President Bob Schmertz has it that there is excellent chance of the return of Byron Baur, West Penn premier in 1927 and 1929, for the impending event. Baur, former Pitt racquet captain, was for many seasons a familiar figure on local courts. He was the first winner of the David I. McCahill Cup, symbol of district men's singles laurels, but for the past several years he has been practicing law in Erie and has confined his jousting to the Great Lakes area.

It is hoped that, in addition to Baur, all other captors of the McCahill flagon, Bill Haseltine, of Philadelphia; B. F. Arkle, of Wheeling, and Dr. John O'Loughlin, of the P. A. A., will be entered. It is certain that O'Loughlin, the present titleholder, will compete, and relatives of Haseltine here are of the belief that the ever-formidable easterner will return determined to annex his third win of the bowl, the victory that would give him permanent possession.

ARKLE IN DOUBT

Arkle's visit is quite doubtful, for the Wheeling ace recently informed John Brown that he intends to cavort at Charleston in the West Virginia State closed conclave, which conflicts with the Western Pennsylvania classic.

Men's singles entries will be received by Chairman Smith at his office in the Frick Building until 5 p. m. on Thursday. He asks that names be filed in writing and entry fees enclosed, but in case of necessity he may be 'phoned at Atlantic 2800. The men's, women's, and mixed doubles and women's singles lists will be open till Monday.

The final 1934 grasp of local varsity racqueters will be uttered this afternoon as Capt. Bill Purcell leads his Duquesne crew against a strong old-timers' group in the annual tennis feature of the Duke Alumni Day.

UPSETS MARK COLLEGE GOLF TOURNEY

By TOM BIRKS

Johnny Wasco, of Pitt, was battling John Jaeger, of Western Reserve, and Jack Bricker, of Western Reserve, was paired with Charles Wallace, his teammate, in the semi-finals of the Tri-state intercollegiate golf tournament at the St. Clair Country Club this afternoon as a result of two startling upsets in the quarter-final round.

Wasco furnished the first major upset in the dope when he defeated Johnny Wayman, of Washington-Jeff, medalist in the qualifying round, 4 up and 3 to play. Wasco finished the first nine holes 2 up on his Wash-Jeff opponent. The second upset saw Wallace vanquish Regis Wolff, Pitt star, 3 and 2. As was the case in the Wasco-Wayman match, Wallace obtained a 2-up advantage at the end of the first nine holes.

Bricker advanced at the expense of Wayne Goldberg, of Waynesburg, 6 and 5, while Jaeger entered the semi-finals by disposing of Charles Kay, of Pitt, 4 and 3. Unless Wasco manages to defeat Jaeger an all-Western Reserve final is assured for tomorrow. Eighteen holes are scheduled in the morning and another round of 18 in the afternoon. The cards:

Wasco, out	4	443	543	444
Wayman, out	5	554	554	555
Wasco, in	4	34	43	443
Wayman, in	5	43	43	443

PHILLIES SWAP HURST FOR CAMILLI

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—(AP.)—Don Hurst, first baseman for the Phillies club of the National League since 1928, has been traded to the Chicago Cubs for Dolph Camilli, young first baseman, the Phillies management announced. It was a straight player-for-player trade, the announcement added.

Camilli was purchased by the Cubs last season from Sacramento for a reported $25,000. Hurst came to the Phillies in a deal with St. Louis, although at the time he was playing with Rochester.

Hurst and Camilli were hitting the same .240—in the last averages.

Manager Jimmy Wilson, of the Phillies, described Camilli as one of the most promising first basemen in the league. He said he is young, fast, a good fielder and hits to all parts of the outfield.

Duquesne Passers Honored by Alumni

The Duquesne University Alumni Association is gathered today on the Bluff campus for an all-day session, the primary object of which is to honor the crack Duquesne basketball varsity.

The alumni attended a mass this morning, held a luncheon at noon and elected officers at 1:30 p. m. A sports program will be on tap for the afternoon, the feature of which will be a baseball game between Duquesne informals and an alumni team. The day will be completed with the annual alumni dance at the Willows this evening.

Danny Ryan New Second For Teddy Yarosz

Lyceum Coach Named As Successor of Late Mike Ray

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Daniel O'C. (Danny) Ryan is the new second of Teddy Yarosz, Monaca's middleweight championship hope. He has been named to succeed the late Mike Ray. He worked with Manager Ray Foutts in Teddy's corner in the latter's bout with Pete Latzo last week, and has been asked to take the post permanently.

Ryan, who resides in Duquesne Heights, is regarded as one of the best of the younger local boxing handlers, and his selection for the important assignment does not come as a surprise. His services have been in demand by many famous visiting boxers, among them Billy Petrolle, Fidel LaBarba, Johnny Jadick, Johnny Datto, King Levinsky and Freddie Miller, and he has worked also in the corners of such local performers as Max Elling, Johnny Durso, Johnny Birek and Al Quaill, and aided Mike Ray in seconding his boxers.

Still a young man, Ryan has been a boxing enthusiast since his early days. He first handled boxers as a boy at Old City Hall. Five years ago he took over the coaching of the amateur boxers in the Pittsburgh Lyceum and since then his teams have won three A. M. A. senior and three A. M. A. junior and one Greater Pittsburgh championships, while he has kept his hand actively in the direction of professionals as well.

A new offer of a guarantee of $15,000 was wired Max Waxman, manager of Vince Dundee, the champion, for a middleweight title fight at Forbes Field late next month by Promoter Lew Raymond last night. Raymond has powerful backing for the promotion and has been authorized to step up his original offer of $12,500, which was declined.

Negotiations have been virtually completed for the Maxie Rosenbloom-Enzo Piermonte light-heavyweight championship fight in the Madison Square Garden Bowl July 19. Rosenbloom engages in two non-title matches in the West this week and then will return to New York.

Eddie and Fritzie Zivic resumed light training yesterday, following their return from California, where they were undefeated in 30 bouts, and will be seen in action here within a couple of weeks.

Joey Speigal of Uniontown plans to ask the State Athletic Commission to recognize him as the welterweight champion of Pennsylvania. He has beaten Billy Holt, Anson Green and Jimmy Belmont and is out with challenges directed at Joey Razzone and Tiger Joe Randall. He boxes Honey Boy Jones at Akron Thursday night.

Between Rounds

A check for $845.34 was turned over to Mrs. Adelaide Ray by Boxing Commissioner W. O. McClelland in his office today, representing the proceeds of the benefit show held at Hickey Park last week for the family of the late Mike Ray. The report showed a net profit of $513 on the show, $175 from the auction of a framed cartoon, $44.84 from the sale of programs and $112.50 from advertising in the program.

A card featuring two 10-round bouts is being arranged for Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night. Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight, will box Paul Pirrone, Cleveland veteran, and Dominic Manetti, of the North Side, will oppose Jackie McFarland, of Canton, O., in the main events. Louis DiSantis, of Cleveland, will meet an opponent to be named in one of three five-round preliminaries.

Many local boxing fans will attend the Primo Carnera-Max Baer heavyweight championship battle in Long Island City Thursday night. One of the veterans who never misses a fight is Harry Neaman. He will be accompanied by former Mayor John S. Herron. Boxing Commissioner W. O. McClelland will go to the fight from a commission meeting in Philadelphia tomorrow. Ted Yarosz and his manager, Ray Foutts, also will attend.

STOCKS BRACE DESPITE SLOW TRADING

NEW YORK, June 12.—(AP.)—Financial markets generally were a more cheerful mood today and prices moved up to firmer levels despite restricted trading volumes.

Stock performed to the satisfaction of recovery proponents, although brokerage houses still bemoaned the slackness of business. Some nervousness continued as evidence as the steel labor controversy appeared to be without any immediate solution.

Grains resumed their advance after early hesitancy. Corn led the upturn with a gain of more than 2 cents a bushel, but wheat, rye and oats were up around a cent. Breaking of the drought was offset by indications that serious damage has already been done to the growing cereals. Cotton and rubber did better and silver was about steady. Bonds were quiet and moderately higher. The dollar advanced against leading foreign exchanges. Renewed weakness was shown by the German mark.

Buying in American Telephone was attributed partly to reports from Washington that the proposed congressional investigation of this utility might be sidetracked for this session. Some of the metal group apparently responded to the Senate's passage of the silver bill.

Wall street was inclined to feel that, even if presidential intervention fails to halt the proposed steel workers' walkout, the mills may not be forced to close down. It was generally assumed that most of the companies have been making careful preparations to meet a strike with the view of maintaining operations.

Indefinite adjournment of the arms conference seemed to have little effect on equities generally, although students of international affairs expressed the fear that the failure of this effort at disarming may prove a further unsettling factor in world economic conditions. The German financial situation was being watched closely for market repercussions. Reich bonds were again heavy.

The probability of lower price levels for many lines of consumer goods under the NRA was construed as bullish in some speculative circles. With reductions in motor car and textile prices it was felt that large inventories would be able to move more freely and that recently receding prodcition and profits would begin to expand.

WHEAT SCORES ADVANCES

CHICAGO, June 12. — Grain prices scored early advances today after a wavering start. Notable strength which developed in the corn market was an outstanding feature, with active speculative buying of corn much in evidence.

Opening unchanged to ⅝ lower, July 98 ¼-⅝, wheat sagged all around, and then advanced. Corn started ⅜ off to ⅜ up, and soon made pronounced general upturns.

U. S. Gets Record Silver Shipment

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP.)—The Treasury has imported 5,000,000 ounces of silver from London and has the metal stored at the New York assay office.

Secretary Morgenthau described it as "the largest single shipment of its kind."

The silver was presumed to be part of the metal referred to by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress advocating the silver bill. The President said at that time that some silver had been purchased. It was understood to have been paid for in gold out of the stabilization fund.

See Danger In Plan of President

By B. C. FORBES

I HAVE four sons, two of them approaching the age when they must go out and face the earning of a living.

Mr. Forbes

President Roosevelt's newly-announced ambition to have the government guarantee "the security of the home, the security of livelihood and the security of social insurance," causes me to wonder if the prospect of so much sheltering, so much safeguarding, so much financial protection, so much paternalism will cause them to discount, disregard, despise my teachings.

I HAVE TRIED to impress upon them that they fit themselves to make their own way in the world, that they must develop self-reliance, that they must cultivate a spirit of manly independence, that they must be prepared to earn every penny coming to them, that they must expect nothing for nothing in this world.

TO ACHIEVE this, I have emphasized that they must be studious and industrious, that they must exercise rational frugality and self-denial until they may have accumulated a competency, that they must aspire not only to take care of themselves and their dependents, but to acquire means to aid generously those in need.

I have warned them against extravagance, ostentation, thriftlessness, thoughtlessness, in order that they may escape the hardships and humiliations which befall so many in old age, explaining that it is infinitely better to be able to bestow charity than to be compelled to accept it.

I TELL THEM:

"Don't let any professor convince you that 'the world owes you a living.' Get it firmly into your head that it is up to you to fit yourself to earn a living and that you will encounter plenty of competition. Don't hesitate to sacrifice in the forepart of your life. Rainy days will come. Make diligent provision for them."

I TELL THEM that, going forth in this spirit, eager to put more into the world than they hope to take out of it, and possessing unshakeable faith in the eternal laws of justice and righteousness, they will find life joyous, they will accept difficulties as a challenge to their manhood, that, doing the right, they will never be tempted to give way to despair, but will find their own life increasing in happiness and service with the passing years.

Above all, that they must not be drones, loafers, leaners; that they must exert themselves to the utmost to be useful; that through self-discipline and self-denial they may reasonably hope to earn the means to practice generosity and unselfishness.

NOW, HOWEVER, there is dangled before them the prospect of an earthly Utopia, ruled by a Santa Claus government, pictured as prepared to shoulder responsibilities which I was taught could be and must be discharged only by each individual for himself, responsibilities which were portrayed not only as inescapable, but as essential to the development of sturdy manhood, development of the soul, development of sterling character.

I AM SOMEWHAT troubled lest my own young men and other young men may imbibe the notion that hereafter there is to be less need for supreme effort, less need for self-denial and self-discipline, less need for sacrificing to save, less necessity for self-reliance, less occasion to worry over finding work to do in the world or to sweat to perform it unstintedly, less reason for systematically striving to provide for old age.

BUT PERHAPS such questionings will prove wholly unwarranted.

OIL PRODUCTION TAKES SPURT

TULSA, Okla., June 12.—(AP.)—Unusually high production in Oklahoma and an increase in Texas and California caused the crude oil output of the United States to rocket last week from 2,491,538 to 2,646,680 barrels a day, the Oil and Gas journal reports.

Production in Oklahoma rose from 476,955 to 548,935 barrels a day. Texas went from 1,080,894 to 1,175,130 barrels, with East Texas showing an advance from 523,550 to 572,720 barrels. California's contribution was an increase from 458,000 to 497,000 barrels.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP.)—Secretary Ickes today approved an allowable gasoline production of 37,200,000 barrels for the country for July.

The 2,600,000 barrels increase was ordered to meet the customary heavy seasonal demand during the opening of the vacation season.

Ickes also said that gasoline inventories should be reduced 3,690,000 barrels during July.

South Benefitted By Processing Tax

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(INS.)—The bulk of the $185,000,000 processing tax paid out to April 30, 1934, went to Southern states, according to a table inserted in the Congressional Record today by Representative Taber (Rep.), of New York.

Officials of the AAA explained that the fact that cotton was the first major crop brought under control resulted in the money going first to the South.

Large sums were shown to be going to some Western states, which officials maintained would increase as the corn-hog program got fully under way.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

Mimi said: "I wish you wouldn't baby her so, Nick. It only makes her worse. She—"

I asked Nora: "What do you say?"

She stood up and stretched without lifting her arms. Her face was pink and lovely as it always is when she has been sleeping. She smiled drowsily at me and said: "Let's go home. I don't like these people. Come on, get your hat and coat, Dorothy."

Mimi said to Dorothy: "Go to bed."

Dorothy put the tips of the fingers of her left hand to her mouth and whimpered through them: "Don't let her beat me, Nick."

I was watching Mimi, whose face wore a placid half-smile, but her nostrils moved with her breathing and I could hear her breathing.

Nora went around to Dorothy. "Come on, we'll wash your face and—"

Mimi made an animal noise in her throat, muscles thickened on the back of her neck, and she put her weight on the balls of her feet.

Nora stepped between Mimi and Dorothy. I caught Mimi by a shoulder as she started forward, put my other arm around her waist from behind, and lifted her off her feet. She screamed and hit back at me with her fists and her hard sharp high heels made dents in my shins.

Nora pushed Dorothy out of the room and stood in the doorway watching us. Her face was very live. I saw it clearly, sharply: everything else was blurred. When clumsy, ineffectual, blows on my back and shoulder brought me around to find Gilbert pommeling me. I could see him but dimly and I hardly felt the contact when I shoved him aside. "Cut it out. I don't want to hurt you, Gilbert." I carried Mimi over to the sofa and dumped her on her back on it, sat on her knees, got a wrist in each hand.

Mimi Turns Purple

Gilbert was at me again. I tried to pop his kneecap, but kicked him too low, kicked his leg from under him. He went down on the floor in a tangle. I kicked at him again, missed, and said: "We can fight afterwards. Get some water."

Mimi's face was becoming purple. Her eyes protruded, glassy, senseless, enormous. Saliva bubbled and hissed between clenched teeth with her breathing, and her red throat—her whole body—was a squirming mass of veins and muscles swollen until it seemed they must burst. Her wrists were hot in my hands and sweat made them hard to hold.

Nora beside me with a glass of water was a welcome sight. "Chuck it in her face," I said.

Nora chucked it. Mimi separated her teeth to gasp and she shut her eyes. She moved her head violently from side to side, but there was less violence in the squirming of her body.

"Do it again," I said.

The second glass of water brought a spluttering protest from Mimi and the fight went out of her body. She lay still, limp, panting.

I took my hands away from her wrists and stood up. Gilbert, standing on one foot, was leaning against a table nursing the leg I had kicked. Dorothy, big-eyed and pale, was in the doorway, undecided whether to come in or run off and hide. Nora, beside me, holding the empty glass in her hand, asked: "Think she's all right?"

"Sure."

Water Quiets Mimi

Presently Mimi opened here eyes, tried to blink the water out of them. I put a handkerchief in her hand. She wiped her face, gave a long shivering sigh, and sat up on the sofa. She looked around the room, still blinking a little. When she saw me she smiled feebly. There was guilt in her smile, but nothing you could call remorse. She touched her hair with an unsteady hand and said: "I've certainly been drowned."

I said: "Some day you're going into one of those things and not come out of it."

She looked past me at her son. "Gil, What's happened to you?" she asked.

He hastily took his hand off his leg and put his foot down on the floor. "I—uh—nothing," he stammered. "I'm perfectly all right." He smoothed his hair, straightened his necktie.

She began to laugh. "Oh, Gil, did you really try to protect me? And from Nick?" Her laughter increased. "It was awfully sweet of you, but awfully silly. Why, he's a monster, Gil. Nobody could—" She put my handkerchief over her mouth and rocked back and forth.

I looked sidewise at Nora. Her mouth was set and her eyes were almost black with anger. I touched her arm. "Let's blow. Give your mother a drink, Gilbert. She'll be all right in a minute or two."

Take Dorothy Home

Dorothy, hat and coat in her hands, tiptoed to the outer door. Nora and I found our hats and coats and followed her out, leaving Mimi laughing into my handkerchief on the sofa.

None of the three of us had much to say in the taxicab that carried us over to the Normandie. Nora was brooding, Dorothy seemed still pretty frightened, and I was tired—it had been a full day.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when we got home. Asta greeted us boisterously. I lay down on the floor to play with her while Nora went into the pantry to make coffee. Dorothy wanted to tell me something that happened to her when she was a little child.

I said: "No. You tried that Monday. What is it a gag? It's late. What was it you were afraid to tell me over there?"

"But you'd understand better if you'd let me—"

"You said that Monday. I'm not a psychoanalyst. I don't know anything about early influences. I don't give a damn about them. And I'm tired—I've been ironing all day."

She pouted at me. "You seem to be trying to make it as hard for me as you can."

"Listen, Dorothy," I said, "you either know something you were afraid to say in front of Mimi and Gilbert or you don't. If you do, spit it out. I'll ask you about any of it I find myself not understanding.

Gil Seeing Father

She twisted a fold of her skirt and looked sulkily at it, but when she raised her eyes they became bright and excited. She spoke in a whisper loud enough for anybody in the room to hear. "Gil's been seeing my father and he saw him today and my father told him who killed Miss Wolf."

"Who?"

She shook her head. "He wouldn't tell me. He'd just tell me that."

"And that's what you were afraid to say in front of Gil and Mimi?"

"Yes. You'd understand that if you'd let me tell you—"

"Something that happened when you were a little child. Well, I won't. Stop it. What else did he tell you?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing about Nunheim?"

"No, nothing."

"Where is your father?"

"Gil didn't tell me."

"When did he meet him?"

"He didn't tell me. Please don't be mad, Nick. I've told you everything he told me."

"And a fat lot it is," I growled. "When'd he tell you this?"

"Tonight. He was telling me when you came in my room, and, honest, that's all he told me."

I said: "It'd be swell if just once one of you people would make a clear and complete statement about something—it wouldn't matter what."

'Riddles and Lies'

Nora came in with the coffee. "What's worrying you now, son?" she asked.

"Things," I said. "riddles, lies, and I'm too old and too tired for them to be any fun. Let's go back to San Francisco."

"Before New Years."

"Tomorow, today."

"I'm willing." She gave me a cup. "We can fly back, if you want, and be there for New Years Eve."

Dorothy said tremulously: "I didn't lie to you, Nick. I told you everything I—Please, please don't be mad with me. I'm so—" She stopped talking to sob.

I rubbed Asta's head and groaned.

Nora said: "We're all worn out and jumpy. Let's send the pup downstairs for the night and turn in and do our talking after we've had some rest. Come on, Dorothy, I'll bring your coffee into the bedroom and give you some night-clothes."

Dorothy got up, said, "Goodnight," to me, "I'm sorry I'm so silly," and followed Nora out.

When Nora returned she sat down on the floor beside me. "Our Dorry does her share of weeping and whining," she said. "Admitting life's not too pleasant for her just now, still..." She yawned. "What was her fearsome secret?"

I told her what Dorothy had told me. "It sounds like a lot of hooey."

Nothing But Hooey

"Why?"

"Why not? Everything else we've got from them has been hooey."

Nora yawned again. "That may be good enough for a detective, but it's not convincing enough for me. Listen, why don't we make a list of all the suspects and all the motives and clues, and check them off against—"

"You do it. I'm going to bed. What's a clue, Mamma?"

"It's like when Gilbert tiptoed over to the phone tonight when I was alone in the livingroom, and he thought I was asleep, and told the operator not to put through any in-coming calls until morning."

"Well, well."

"And," she said, "it's like Dorothy discovering that she had Aunt Alice's key all the time."

"Well, well."

WORLD WAR COMMANDERS—CENTRAL POWERS COLLAPSE

The terrible drive of Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Gen. Ludendorff in March, 1918, induced the Allies (Entente) to place their European forces under the command of French Marshal Ferdinand Foch. Victory was the result of the united effort. The Western German front soon collapsed: so did other fronts of the Central Powers, who faced defeat as well as revolution and chaos. Nov. 11, 1918, armistice was signed by Germany, followed by the other Central Powers, opening the way for peace negotiations.

TO PRESERVE DEMOCRACY UNITED STATES ENTERS WORLD WAR

The prospects of the Central Powers holding their own in European fronts seemed very hopeful at the close of the third war year. But they were unsuccessful on the sea, though inflicting great damage by submarines. To uphold the freedom of the sea, to defend the rights of small nations, United States entered the World War on the side of the Allies (Entente).

Congress declared war April 6, 1917, spelling defeat to the Central Powers. 10,000,000 young Americans registered for war service within two months. The whole American industry, with its tremendous resources, was enlisted to produce war materials and supplies. American Army and Navy appeared in the battle zones. (U. S. History)

MERCURY VAPOR LAMPS—INVENTION OF PETER COOPER-HEWITT

They comprise a vacuum tube with mercury filled bulb at one end (—electrode) and an iron cup at the other (+electrode) and have an arc starting mechanism (auxiliary). This consists of a hand or electric tilting device that causes mercury to flow between the electrodes, connecting and interrupting the current, starting the arc. Only direct current can produce a mercury arc, but by employing a rectifier and two positive electrodes, alternating current can be used (above).

The mercury arc light is bluish green, contains no red and is very rich in short waves (ultra violet) rendering great service in chemical and medical application. Through use of special glass or quartz (SiO_2) tubes the beneficial effect of ultra violet radiation can be enjoyed indoors, reducing colds, promoting health. TOM AND HUCK

Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn are characters brilliantly drawn by Samuel Langhorne Clemens (1835-1910), who wrote under pseudonym Mark Twain.

The amusing tales of their adventures are masterworks of humorous fiction and give also a true picture of the old life along the Mississippi. (Am. Lit.)

FATS, ESTERS—MANUFACTURE OF SOAP

Fats are esters of glycerin and higher organic acids as: palmitic- ($C_{15}H_{31}COOH$), stearic- ($C_{17}H_{35}COOH$) and oleic-acids ($C_{17}H_{33}COOH$). E. g. Glyceryl oleate or olein [$C_3H_5(C_{17}H_{33}COO)_3$] is liquid fat, oil. Glyceryl palmitate or palmitin and stearate or stearin are solid fats. Lard and tallow are mixtures of the three. Esters with bases give salts of the fatty acids, called soaps; the process is called saponification.

Soaps are made commercially from mixed fats (tallow, vegetable oils) or resin and caustic soda (NaOH) giving hard soaps. With potassium hydroxide (KOH) the yield is soft soap.

E. g.: $C_3H_5(C_{17}H_{35}COO)_3 + 3NaOH = C_3H_5(OH)_3$ (glycerin) $+ 3C_{17}H_{35}COONa$ (sodium stearate, a hard soap).

Fat and caustic soda are boiled in a kettle (above), salt (NaCl) is added; soap coagulates, rises to top; liquid is drawn off and distilled for glycerin. (Chemistry)

ARTHRITIS—INFLAMMATION OF THE JOINTS

Arthritis presents itself as painful swelling, accompanied by fever, redness, caused by different bacteria. Sometimes it is associated with rheumatism, typhoid fever, tuberculosis and other infectious diseases. There are acute and chronic forms, the latter resulting in deformations. The treatment includes injections of vaccines, colloidal sulphur, physiotherapy, drugs, radium and X-ray irradiation according to the cause. (Gen. Science) (102 II A)

The Bugs Expedition to Scotland

Bronx Zoo has offered a cash prize for the capture of the Scotch sea monster. Twenty-five thousand dollars on the line and no questions answered.

They've put a snapper in the proposition that may stop our intrepid explorers. The monster must weigh two tons, F. O. B., and must be 40 feet from stem to stard.

No wonder the boys with the bamboo rods and light lines are going up to the mountains. We figured on capturing him ourselves.

The bait is easy. They tie themselves into knots over baked marshmallows dusted lightly with powdered cinnamon.

The only thing that stops us is his bulk. How are you going to get 40 feet of Scotch ocean demon into a rowboat. You can't roll those things up on an empty spool.

If the Bronx Zoo will only offer twenty-five grand for something else we think we can make good. Or we will even compromise.

What will the Bronx Zoo pay for the picture of some fierce monster's footprints?

After all, the Scotch haven't really seen anything of the animal that you can stuff.

The boys start their expeditions with a bottle in a hamper. A swig or two and one Aberdeen scientist yells, "There she is." He means the bottle.

The other student takes the bottle and screams, "The camera ain't loaded." But he is.

The only photograph brought in so far resembles anything you think you saw. We know that it happens to be a long string of sea-weed in battle formation. The picture was printed in a lot of newspapers in the country and looks like garden hose that had been borrowed so often it hated to go home.

Nevertheless, we shall make a try for the Bronx Zoo prize. It's too big to overlook. And if there ain't a sea serpent in the heather now there soon will be. We are going to take one with us.

Any young man can join our expedition provided he is strong, alert, fond of adventure and is a notary public. We may have to cook up some affidavits proving that we were on the spot where the serpent was last seen by two reliable tabloid reporters.

New French Propaganda

A Group of Americans in Paris Issue a Rather Silly Appeal

French propaganda, designed to influence American opinion, has taken a new form.

Recently there was issued a pamphlet on the French debt, which purports to come from a group of Americans composed of graduates and former students of Columbia University residing in France, and known as the Columbia Alumni Club of Paris.

The pamphlet, widely circulated through our mails, bears the imprint, however, of the "Centre D'Informations Documentaires, 23, Rue Notre-Dame-Des-Victoires, Paris," which strongly suggests that the Columbia Club of Paris is perhaps allowing itself to be used in the systematic campaign of propaganda formally launched under French government patronage some months ago.

With a presumption, rather common to expatriates in a foreign environment, who soon lose the power to think as Americans, it purports to give "an American view of the French debt question," disavowing any intention to justify either the French or the American position. The hope is expressed that there will be an end of "wrangling over the rights and wrongs of the case," and it pictures America, the prodigal lender and creditor, as equally to blame with France, the repudiator and defaulter.

"No people," it proceeds, "has a record of flawless good faith, and promises kept to the letter. The nations are sinners all, and now, if ever, is the time for mutual tolerance and forgiveness."

The writer of this pamphlet hopes his appeal will arouse a sympathetic echo in this country.

HOW CAN IT?

France borrowed $1,970,000,000 in cash from us during the war. After the close of the war she borrowed $1,027,447,000 more, also in cash, and in addition, she received at our hands food and supplies worth $407,341,145 on credit.

What she has repaid on these debts is pitifully, scandalously trivial. It does not amount to even a respectable fraction of the interest alone, at the reduced rate provided in the refunding agreements.

This country has cut the true total of France's debt more than one-half. From the great sums, loaned in generosity and good-will to France—from the huge war loans which saved her from destruction, from the post-war and peace-time loans of almost equal amount, which made possible her rebuilding and restoration—the return we have received—DEFAULT IN PAYMENT, REPUDIATION of all OBLIGATION, and SCORN and DERISION in the place of a DECENT GRATITUDE!

The "tolerance and forgiveness" which this rather silly pamphlet entreats of us, has been rather fully manifested.

About all that is left for us to do, if such an appeal is entitled to any response, is to kiss the defaulter and repudiator on both cheeks—and lend him some more money.

A Short-Sighted Protest

Homewood Church People Are Unwise to Embarrass the State Liquor Stores

The Homewood-Brushton Council of Churches is circulating petitions opposing the proposed establishment of a state liquor store at 710 Homewood avenue on the ground that two churches are nearby.

The churches need have no fear of disorder. There is no drinking at the state liquor stores, no loafing, no unseemly conduct. There are not even advertising signs.

We can see nothing in the proximity of a state liquor store which could give offense to church people except that it might be a disagreeable reminder to some that the "noble experiment" failed.

The churches are unwise to antagonize the state liquor stores and make things difficult for them, because the Pennsylvania Wholesale Liquor Dealers Association, with the aid of powerful allies, is conducting an energetic campaign to abolish the system of state stores and return the business into private hands.

One of the numerous complaints made against the state stores is that some of them are not located at sites, like the proposed Homewood location, where the public can be conveniently served.

In opposing a good location for the Homewood store the churches are playing into the hands of those who would like to bring back the liquor trade as it was before prohibition.

Let the state stores be abolished, and privately owned liquor stores re-established, with advertising displays and less strict regulations, and the churches may have real cause for protest.

Victims of Oppression

Pittsburghers Should Give Liberally to the German Relief Campaign

America has always been sympathetic to the victims of oppression and tyranny in other lands. Pittsburgh has often been conspicuous for its generosity in going to the relief of such unfortunates. If we remember rightly, Pittsburgh gave more liberally, in proportion to population, to one of the funds raised for the relief of Armenian victims of the Turks, than any other American city.

Another appeal is being made to our generosity by a group of our most respected and most respectable citizens—the local sponsors of the "United Jewish Appeal for German Relief."

Pittsburgh is asked to contribute $100,000 to a fund of three million dollars that is being raised in 250 American cities for the succor of the victims of Hitlerism. The money is urgently needed to relieve the distress of the refugees from Germany and of the Jews still in Germany who have been deprived of their jobs and otherwise persecuted.

Surely Pittsburgh will not fail to grant this modest request. The goal will be reached if every Pittsburgher who feels sorry for the victims of persecution will make a contribution. The campaign is scheduled to close tomorrow. Give today.

The Waif and the Glutton

(Copyright, 1934.)

An obsolete system of county and local governments—relics of the ox-cart age—affecting every section, keeps thousands of needless, costly offices in existence and maintains a horde of useless politicians—AT THE EXPENSE OF THE SCHOOL CHILDREN OF THE NATION.

Education is the frail waif, starving, while politicians glut themelves at the feast of public funds, and the children of the TAXPAYERS WHO SUPPLY THOSE PUBLIC FUNDS are deprived of their natural right to a decent public education.

It is a humiliating picture. President Roosevelt has denounced the "archaic, expensive and wasteful forms of local government" that eat up the taxes. He has decried curtailment of educational advantages to the young.

But what is needed is a nation, alert to the discreditable aspects of the situation, that will arise en masse, demand and get—

"FEWER POLITICIANS AND MORE AND BETTER PUBLIC SCHOOLS."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 12.—Manhattan is losing its sharp consciousness of celebrity. Even the autograph collectors dwindle. No particular reason. Just one of those things. Rudy Vallee is no longer followed. Neither is Mary Pickford. Lionel Barrymore recently walked Broadway with only a few head-turns.

Jeritza and Lily Pons shop on the avenue without a swirl of gawkers. The persistant crowd that awaited the daily arrival of the 20th Century for movie stars turns to something else. Mayor La Guardia goes to the opera or play with no buzz-fuzz. And they actually ignored Lupe Velez at a recent first night.

Only two celebrities remain with distinct power to start the pack in full cry again. These are Lindbergh and Garbo who have whetted curiosity to the drooling point by constant refusal to be seen. New York loves to be snubbed. Some think national idleness is abating and lessens the celebrity furor.

Others say it is no longer possible to pick up small change selling autographs. The exchange on West 46th street has closed and there is no market whatever. Jimmy Walker's signature that once brought $2 is now procurable for a dime. Babe Ruth's brings only a nickel.

Sime Silverman's son, Sid, is the most self-effacing in the Broadway world. Since his famous dad's passing he has, with Abel Green and Jack Pulaski, capably piloted Variety, dividing time between New York and Hollywood. He is the husband of the attractive Marie Saxon, former dancer, and when not in his office is home. To him, Broadway is a news center, not a playground.

Smart florists report a perk, presaging at least a mental upswing. The well-dressed man is dropping in for a morning lapel flower again, a gesture that almost vanished when the brokers went broke. This morning I saw Frank Crowninshield adorned with a blue corn flower; Owen Davis, Jr., a white carnation; and Aubrey Eads, a red rosebud. Also, fewer men are hatless along streets this summer.

And up in the jungles of Harlem the dusky dudes, who featured purple and yellow ground length overcoats, are now going in for sideburns clear down to here. Giving many of the high yellows a Spanish grandee effect. Duke Ellington was first to sport them. And Cab Calloway gave them extra panache.

The most attractively decorated home in Harlem is that of the singer Ethel Waters, who rode to fame on a wavering blue note, along 7th avenue. She turned a high-priced interior decorator loose carte blanche. The first floor is, quite appropriately, a study in brown from heavy chocolate to light sepia relieved only by a general carpeting of honey shade. She has, next to Bill Robinson, become wealthiest of the colored performers, her fortune topping that of Florence Mills, which was slightly over $100,000 at its peak. O, yes, one of the Black Belt's newest night spots is called the Ubangi Club, where African bush tom toms beat a barbaric bolero until dawn.

Harlem's richest and, by long odds, most celebrated citizen, Bill Robinson, has been by popular vote elected "Mayor of Harlem." Like all locality mayors, he adjusts family differences and intercedes for those who fall afoul the law. Robinson is a typical levee-strutting type with a derby cocked on one side and clothes that would shame a zebra. But his cockiness is in good fun. He is a very humble citizen whose tap dancing, although past 50, brings him $1,100 a week. He has played more benefits than Eddie Cantor. And with less ballyhoo.

The bicycle revival continues its fast pace. Central Park has a steady stream of pedalers as have the highways further out. The girls wear sleeveless jerseys, shorts that merely cover their hips and berets with a bright flounce of tassel, gloves matching the tassel. Many are the richly upholstered maids we used to see in stunty roadsters and Paquin sport togs hitting it up for Long Island spas. And in their new biking role appear to be having even more fun.

The only other customer in a Forty-sixth street barber shop today was getting the works—a $2 mud massage and violet ray spray. A manicurist was glossing his nails while the shine boy's flannel was hitting up a flourishing ackatack-acketytack. I peeped into his hatband going out. It bore the name of a merchant in Amarillo, Tex. Twenty years ago it might have worn a Gallipolis, O., label. Country boys, coming to town, always bust loose first in the barber shop.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

In modernizing yourself isn't it true you've become too liberal in your views?

You think of older persons who still maintain strict ideas of right and wrong as being old fogies.

Some of the things such persons frown upon you think of as nothing that should be offensive to good taste or good morals.

Deportment which a few years ago would have stigmatized men and women and young people as being unwholesome is looked upon by you as something to be condoned.

You say it's progression and that obsolete principles have no place in present day life.

To be considered "liberal" very likely you are overstepping the bounds of propriety of even the present liberal age.

Have you ever thought of the effect on your children or the effect on the children of other parents because of your so-called "liberal attitude?"

If you cast good morals aside at an age when discretion and good judgment should temper your actions and words, what do you expect the young people to do?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Why Does Life Go Into a Tailspin?

Just another broken home. Such a common story that you'd hardly notice it if you saw it in print. Yet, if it happened to YOU, you'd be as surprised, shocked and stunned as this poor wife is today.

How could he do it, after all those happy years of married life? Such a quiet, steady man! So good to her and the children! Those terrible things they heard about other husbands and wives—they couldn't possibly happen to THEM! Then suddenly, hideously, out of a clear sky, it DID happen. The wife came home from a long siege at the hospital to find—

But you can fill in the rest for yourself. The furtive week-end trips, when she'd supposed he was "away on business." The nights at the office. The whole heart-breakingly familiar sordid affair.

WHY DID HE DO IT?

What do I think of them all—of her, her husband and the other woman?"

As to that, I have no answer. What can I think, not knowing any of them. But I do know a bit about life and marriage—and human beings. And perhaps that will help.

Regardless of who you are, or what you're up against, you can always bet on this one fact.

NEITHER LIFE NOR MARRIAGE, NOR YOU, NOR THE OTHER FELLOW IS EVER GOING TO TURN OUT ACCORDING TO SPECIFICATIONS.

We're told so many pretty fairy-tales . . . we're taught so many delightful theories . . . and we invent, for ourselves, so many cockeyed notions . . . about what life and people ought to be.

BUT THE REALITY NEVER FITS ANY OF THEM!

Neither marriage nor life nor folks turn out as we think they will, or should.

NOR DO WE OURSELVES TURN OUT AS WE PLANNED WE WOULD!

We go along for years, leading exemplary lives, holding the finest principles, feeling the purest motives. Never once do we consciously desire to harm or fail anyone—to do anything shameful, reckless or unkind.

AND THEN SUDDENLY, FROM SOME SECRET DARKNESS WITHIN US, SPRINGS A STRANGE SELFWHOSE EXISTENCE WE HAVE NEVER SUSPECTED — AND SWEEPS OUR NORMAL PROGRAM ASIDE, AND WRECKS OUR LIVES.

That isn't true of just some miserable isolated spirit. To a greater or less degree, it's true of all of us.

WE ALL HAVE DOUBLE NATURES. WE ALL ARE DR. JEKYLLS AND MR. HYDES.

How do we get that way? Does Fate will it?

No—we get that way because we want to get that way . . . through our own decisions!

But surely we don't deliberately decide to become cruel and shameless scoundrels, breaking the hearts of those who love us most, dragging our own names in the gutter!

No, we don't deliberately choose any such tragic career. But each day, each hour, we make seemingly trivial decisions to do the weak or the wrong things . . . petty indulgences of our laziness, greediness, vanity, cowardice or restlessness . . . secret evasions and excuses which never even come into open action.

We think those small, forgotten acts "don't count." But they do. They are the warp and woof of our behavior. They are the things which determine our character.

FOR SUDDENLY, SOME DAY, WE ARE CONFRONTED WITH A GREAT TEMPTATION AND OUR NATURES, WEAKENED BY THOSE SMALL, FORGOTTEN SURRENDERS, CANNOT STAND THE PRESSURE.

Why do we do the terrible things we sometimes do? That's why.

And how should we treat those who hurt and fail us in such ghastly "tailspins?"

HOW WOULD WE WISH TO BE TREATED OURSELVES?

We ALL are Dr. Jekylls and Mr. Hydes. We ALL "have done those things which we ought not to have done, have left undone things which we ought to have done."

Perhaps YOU haven't come to YOUR day of reckoning yet. But when and if you do—

WHAT WOULD YOU WANT THE OTHER FELLOW TO DO TO YOU?

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A Single Pace

"What shall I do with my life?"
you say.
"With the years that are coming, grave years or gay?"
And while you wonder, life slips away!

Life is a road that stretches far,
Glad years finished, brave years that are
And years yet to be, each aglow like a star!

The road goes winding, goes flowing by,
From east to west and from sky
to sky,
The road where your love and your toiling lie.

It wanders and reaches from rim to rim
Of far horizons, uncertain, dim,
And no man knows what it brings to him.

Though your road for year after year you can trace,
Through many a strange and lovely place,
You can shape it for only a single pace.

All of life that is given to any man
To fashion after his hope's bright
plan
Is a breath's brief space, is a footstep's span.

The Fanatical Devotion of the Japanese to What They Consider Duty Explains Their Power

By Edwin C. Hill

REMEMBER THAT death is lighter than a feather, but duty is heavier than a mountain." Fifteen words written in Japanese script on a huge gold screen above the portrait of the great Emperor Mutsu in every regimental headquarters of the Imperal Japanese army. And that injunction is the creed, not only of every Japanese soldier who walks or rides or flies, but is the creed that is implanted in the mind of every Japanese child from the cradle.

It goes a long way to explain why little Japan, in the short space of 35 years, has been able, with her population of sixty million, to dominate vast Asia, with the exception of Siberia and India. It is the perfect explanation of why a few thousand Japanese troops have been able to rip a whole vast province out of disorganized fatalistic China and to batter their way through the Great Wall and threaten Peiping and all North China.

Taught His Life Belongs to Mikado

THE JAPANESE soldier is taught that the reason he was given life is to die on the battlefield for the Emperior, if the Emperor commands. Japan is strong and self-reliant and fearless because they recognize the will and authority of only one human being on earth, their Emperor. From childhood through life, the Japanese is taught and believes that every good act is an act of loyalty to the Emperor, and every bad act an act of disloyalty.

The farmer is taught that every sunny day reveals the graciousness of the Emperor, who has willed that the sun should give its warmth and light. The Japanese policeman curbs an unruly crowd with maxims from the imperial rescripts. The officers of the army bring tears to the eyes of the offenders against discipline when they read passages from the Emperor's commands.

From the day that a Japanese soldier enters the service of his country, he is taught the Seven Duties, among which are loyalty, valor, patriotism, humility, morality and honor. And with these, the glory and ease of death for the sake of the emperor. No nation, since Rome crushed Carthage, has been so disciplined as the Japanese people. And that is why the vast, undisciplined hoards of China have gone down before the Japanese invasion like falling tenpins.

The Japanese soldier is forbidden everything which tends toward frivolity or luxury or extravagance. His life is as stern and hard and as devoted as the life of those iron-hearted Spartans of Lacedemonia who went forth to battle with the injunction: "Return with your shield or upon it."

His pay is $1.45 a month, and he must not spend more than half of this on amusement. He must not receive money, food, clothing or sweetmeats from home. He is not supposed to carry more than three cigarets or one match at a time. These are the men and the discipline that have defied the League of Nations, the league which expects the United States to pull its irons out of the fire.

Litvinoff Close To Machiavelli

RUSSIA PLAYS a close and curious game with Japan over the great chessboard of Asia. Two months ago only, there was more than a prospect of war between the two powers that have bitten deeply into the old Chinese Empire. And that possibility has by no means disappeared. But guided by the cunning of a one-time London traveling salesman, Russia has refrained so far from knocking the chip off a shoulder truculently thrust forward by the Mikado.

The Bear bides his time, unquestionably, under the advice of this same Litvinoff, recently a guest at the White House, where he smoked and chatted with President Roosevelt, hinted of millions in Russian trade and generally did a smart piece of diplomatic work. The world knows the erstwhile traveling salesman, Mr. Harrison, by his real name, which is Maxim Litvinoff, Commissar of Foreign Affairs for the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Whether the new deal between Russia and Japan is merely to spite the League of Nations, and incidentally, the United States, or whether it is based upon deeper motives, does not appear on the surface. But Maxim Litvinoff is the closest thing to Michiavelli that modern diplomacy has produced. Portly, 56-year-old Litvinoff, with his shrewd eyes behind gold-rimmed glasses and his bland smile, is no amateur in the confidence game of European politics.

He comes of a middle-class family, but went Red early in his career, when the Czar was on the throne. He had to get out of Russia in haste. He went to England and spent many years there, plating his Tartar personality with polished British mannerisms. He sold British goods under the name of Harrison and married an Englishwoman, Miss Ivy Low, of a highly conservative journalistic family.

English is the language of their home in Moscow. Even the servants must speak it, and there is an English tutor for the little Litvinoffs. But for all his English overlay, and his gold-plate stage manners, Litvinoff remains a strong Communist as he moves about Europe playing Stalin's game.

Debtor Nations Refuse To Give Up War Gains

By James T. Williams, Jr.

SOME ARRESTING facts and figures regarding Europe's war debts to the United States were given to the people of California last week in an address at Los Angeles, which might well have been broadcast to other states of the Union.

In the course of his argument against American entrance into the League of Nations or the League Court and against the cancellation of any of the war debts owed this country, J. Reuben Clark, Jr., former Undersecretary of State and the worthy successor of the late Dwight W. Morrow as ambassador to Mexico, made no apology for linking the league and the court with war debts.

"All are are related," he said, "in a powerful impulse which represents active, impending, entangling alliances against which we were warned by the father of our country."

None Offered To Relinquish Gains

EVALUATING at one hundred and ninety-eight thousands of millions of dollars the colonies wrested from Germany by the Allied Powers, Ambassador Clark added this challenging assertion to his appraisal of the value in money of all this conquered territory:

"In all the discussion of cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States I have not heard a single suggestion from any one of the debtor nations of relinquishment to us of any of its war gains."

Ambassador Clark's allusion to the former German colonies recalls one of the brilliant contributions to the great debate which took place in the United States Senate 14 years ago. This was the speech of Senator Borah, of Idaho, on March 3, 1922, when the Senate had under consideration in open executive session the Treaty of Versailles, the so-called treaty of peace with Germany, which included the covenant of the League of Nations.

Describing Europe since the armistice and addressing himself to the imperialistic aspects of post-war European policies, Mr. Borah said:

"There has never been such land-grabbing in the history of Europe as has taken place since the armistice was signed. There never has been such an exhibition of imperialism in the history of Europe as this treaty and this League of Nations threatens to underwrite.

"I call attention, first, to what Lloyd George said during the days of the war. He said:

"'As the Lord liveth, England does not want a yard of territory. We are in this war for motives of purest chivalry to defend the weak.'

"This is a quotation from Lloyd George. Now, what did England get?

"Leaving out Persia, England has received as a result of the war at least one million six hundred and seven thousand and fifty-three square miles of territory and dominancy over thirty-five million people.

"If you will take Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas and add them together, you will have within a few hundred square miles precisely what England has secured out of the war."

Other Nations Also Land Grabbers

BUT SENATOR BORAH was fair enough to add that Great Britain was not the only nation which had been grabbing land.

"France," he continued, "has taken possession of Syria, in contravention of every principle upon which we went into the conference at Versailles and in opposition to the wishes of the people and inhabitants of the territory."

The United States did not share in the division of German territory which the allied nations took over.

"We came back from the peace table clean—with nothing in our hands," as Ambassador Clark said in Los Angeles. "That was one of the high spots in world history. We should always be proud of it."

But the Old World does not like to be reminded of this fact, and those Americans who are criticizing President Roosevelt for refusing to cancel the war debts seem to have forgotten all about the land-grabbing which took place after the armistice, as well as the names of the nations which did the grabbing.
